Hysteria Charged To Administration

Alternative Is 'American Way' the Republicans Offer, He Asserts.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, July 30.—Before a crowd of 25,000 persons whose wild cheering delayed his address for ten minutes and frequently interrupted him, Col. Frank Knox tonight accepted the Republican nomination for Vice President and declared "the preservation of free enterprise" is the fundamental issue in the 1936 campaign.

He bitterly denounced the "hysterical experiments" of the New Deal, the "false promises" of a paternalistic Government, regimentation, and "coercion of Congress," and declared the Republican Party promises a system of Government under which Americans can develop "self-support, self-government and self-respect."

Introduced by Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, Col. Knox stood helpless while the enthusiastic and colorful throng conducted a 10-minute demonstration of approval. When the demonstration finally was ended, the nominee, with radio time limited, had to contend with frequent outbursts of enthusiasm.

Senator Steiwer, introducing Col. Knox, hit at "would-be political royalists," apparently having in mind the "economic royalists" term hurled at his opponents by President Roosevelt in his acceptance speech at Philadelphia.

Indicts Political Royalists.

"Much less is our well being promoted by would-be political royalists," he said, "who, to perpetuate their power, are willing to array class against class in a Nation which has never recognized class."

"We propose," he continued, "to substitute leadership which comes from the people themselves. It will completely administer the Government's business because it knows the meaning of business. It * * * shares the people's knowledge of the value of a dollar. It * * * springs from those who know what it means to be responsible."

He read to the throng a message from Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Presidential nominee, saying:

"May I add to the warm tribute which you are paying tonight to my friend and fellow worker, Col. Frank Knox. The years of our friendship add for me a meaning to our new relationship. They contribute a confidence and an enthusiasm to the work we shall do together in a common cause. The Republican Party will gain much strength in this campaign from the experience, the vigor and the outstanding ability of Col. Knox."

Outburst of Applause.

An outburst of applause followed reading of the telegram.

Previously, Edward A. Hayes, preconvention campaign manager for Col. Knox, had spoken briefly, asserting that "Republicanism is synonymous with Americanism," and introducing National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, who in turn introduced Senator Steiwer.

Chairman Hamilton predicted "the American people will, on the third day of November, bring to these gentlemen (Landon and Knox) another and vastly more important message—a message that will be a clear and decisive answer to those who would repudiate constitutional government and substitute for it a dictatorial, wasteful bureaucracy, and our people will at the same time advise Gov. Landon and Col. Knox that they have been elected to the highest executive offices in our land."

Col Knox referred to the outstanding bolter of the Democratic Party when he said:

"As Al Smith has expressed it, the American people do not want a dictator, not even if they could get a good one."

"Two ways lie ahead of us," he told the crowd in the Chicago Stadium and the radio audience.

Broom Factory Hand Captures Honors at Clam Diggers' Rodeo

By Edward T. Folliard.

A Staff Correspondent.

Chincoteague Island, Va., July 30. The strangest rodeo in all the world took place here today. It was strange for a number of reasons, beginning with the setting—a remote island in the Atlantic, the inhabitants of which spend 364 days in the year thinking about the price of oysters, crabs and fish.

But on this day the thought was all of Chincoteague's wild Spanish ponies. The fishermen and the clam diggers knocked off work, and so did the farmers from back in the tomato and cantaloupe country on the mainland. There were visitors also from Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

A truck driver from Trenton came down to see if the wild ponies were really wild. His curiosity was so keen—and the $10 prize so alluring

Roosevelt Visits 'Quoddy Town On Quebec Trip

President Due to Arrive in Canadian Metropolis This Morning.

By the Associated Press.

Eastport, Me., July 30.—President Roosevelt turned toward Quebec late today for a conference on American problems after a personal appearance on the eastern shore of Maine.

Announcing a change in plans in midafternon, the President, accompanied by his mother and Col. Philip B. Fleming, in charge of the abandoned Passamaquoddy Tidal Power Project, left his Campobello Island summer home by motor and ferried over to Luebec, Me.

Riding in a closed sedan the President went on to Quoddy Village, where he inspected a model of the tide-harnessing project.

He told scores of citizens grouped about his car:

"I hope when I get back next year it ('Quoddy) will be going."

Another large crowd saw him arrive at the Eastport wharf to board the yacht Potomac for the hour's run to St. Andrews, New Brunswick. He left shortly after 6 p. m., Eastern daylight time.

In St. Andrews a special train was ready for the trip to Quebec, where he will arrive tomorrow morning.

James Roosevelt, eldest son, and his wife; military and naval aids and two secretaries were to accompany him to Quebec. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt left Campobello today by motor for Hyde Park.

One of the subjects the President will take up in his talks with the Democratic Aid Selected to Edit Paper in Maine

Norman W. Baxter to Head Portland News as State Election Approaches.

So eager, apparently, is the Democratic national committee to win the September 14 general election in Maine, the first in the country, that it has placed a member of its publicity staff in charge of the news and editorial departments of a Portland newspaper that, it was reported here yesterday, will be virtually the New Deal spokesman in the Pine Tree State.

Baxter Is Director.

Norman W. Baxter, member of the committee staff and formerly chief public relations officer of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, it was revealed, has become editorial director of the Portland Evening News. It was also reported that new funds have been made available for operation of the paper.

Joined Staff Here.

Baxter was given the position upon recommendation of the Democratic committee after Phillip Chapman, president of the Maine Publishing Co., which publishes the paper, had told of plans to revive the publication, once suspended for several days last spring. The impression was created here that the committee had been influential in interesting new capital in the venture.

Baxter for several years was man-

Transocean Caller of Diplomats Gets Warning From Uncle Sam

Cleveland, July 30.—Abe Pickus, who talked of international peace to foreign diplomats by long-distance telephone, today said the United States district attorney cautioned him against reference to United States treaties or policies in his conversations regarding world amity.

Pickus claimed his World War experience as a doughboy in France caused him to telephone Hirosi Saito, Japanese Ambassador; Alexander Troyanovsky, Russian Ambassador, and Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary.

Landon Backs Labor's Right To Organize

Drives in Unorganized Industries Are Said to Merit Protection.

Nominee Recognizes Use of Union Organizers, He Tells Thomas.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 30.—Gov. Alf M. Landon told a Presidential opponent in a letter made public today "public authorities" should protect the right of labor unions to "to promote by lawful and proper means the organization of an unorganized industry."

This right of union organization, he said, "includes the right to send in an organizer."

Landon added that in "the only serious labor disturbance" during his Governorship, "my action * * * protected the workers in the right of free speech and free assembly."

He replied to Thomas' request for elaboration of Landon's acceptance speech statement that the freedom "from interference" pledged organizing employes by the Republican platform "means, as I read it, entire freedom from coercion or intimidation by the employer, any fellow employe or any other person."

Thomas had written under date of July 24, saying that "employers' organizations like the National Manufacturers Association" had used the freedom-from-interference phrase "to mean denial of the right of a labor union, or labor unions" to promote organization of an unorganized industry.

Asked Interpretation.

"Is this the interpretation to be given your words?" Thomas asked.

"In my statement which you quote," Landon replied in his letter dated July 27 "there is nothing to suggest that I am in favor of infringing in any way the right of free speech or free assembly. I am opposed to any such infringement.

"The workers have the right to meet, among themselves or with others of their own choice to promote organization, with complete freedom from interference from anyone whatsoever. The workers should be fully protected in this right by the public authorities.

"This necessarily includes the right of a labor union to promote by lawful and proper means the organization of unorganized industry, which includes the right to send in an organizer."

In New York, Thomas, commenting late today on Landon's letter, said "it would seem Gov. Landon has recognized as legitimate the activities of the Committee on Industrial Organization and of the Southern Tenant Farmers Association."

The "serious labor disturbance" referred to by Landon was a lead and zinc mine and smelting strike in June and July, 1935. It covered sections of Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma.

Barred Imported Gunmen.

"I acceded to a request, jointly preferred by the sheriff and prosecuting attorney of Cherokee County that I send troops to maintain order," Landon said. "I instructed the troops, through the adjutant general of Kansas to maintain order, to disarm all armed civilians, in-

Official of Senate 'Taken for a Ride' By U. S. Marshals

James J. Dunn, assistant custodian of the United States Senate, was "taken for a ride" yesterday by United States marshals serving a writ of attachment on his car.

It was a case of "seize my car, seize me," for Dunn. He was at the Capitol when Deputies J. T. Mattingly and Joseph Doherty arrived to attach the car on a judgment of $408 obtained in the Municipal Court by the Wardman Park Hotel.

Dunn, irate, refused to budge from the vehicle. A Capitol policeman came to his assistance. Then Chief Deputy United States Marshal Thomas Ott appeared and ordered the towing truck into action.

When Dunn still woldn't leave the machine, both he and his car were towed away. The marshals said Dunn rode all the way to the storage garage on Champlain street northwest.

Clevenger Evidence Sent Here for Study

A quantity of secret evidence which may lead to the slayer of 18-year-old Helen Clevenger, New York University honor student, in her room at the Battery Park Hotel, Asheville, N. C., two weeks ago, was being examined in the crime laboratory of the Department of Justice yesterday.

The materials found in the room where the girl was assaulted and shot to death were brought to Washington yesterday.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, declined to discuss the evidence.

It was learned here last night that W. H. Wheelwright, a Federal bank examiner, who lives in the 2000 block of New Hampshire avenue northwest, had made a special trip to Asheville Sunday at the request of Sheriff Laurence Brown, but that he had been unable to shed any light on the case. He was a guest on July 16, when the girl was slain.

2,000 Leftists Reported Slain By Insurgents Near Zaragoza; France May Aid Loyal Armies

Cities of Gulf Await Impact Of Hurricane

Storm to Strike Between Middle Florida, Mobile; Is Moving Slowly.

By the Associated Press.

Pensacola, Fla., July 30.—Hurricane warnings blinked through rain squalls along the extreme western Florida and eastern Alabama Gulf Coast tonight.

A tropical storm slowly whirled its way northwestward through the Gulf of Mexico, kicking up unusually high tides and fanning the west Florida coastline with winds which reached momentary gusts of 50 miles an hour.

Warnings issued yesterday, when the storm first entered the gulf after cutting across extreme southern Florida, sent all ships to cover. This deprived the Weather Bureau of the usual reports from vessels in the storm's path and caused observers to say they were uncertain where and when the disturbance would touch land once more.

To Strike Tonight.

However, the Weather Bureau's late afternoon advisory said the storm probably would strike the northern Gulf Coast somewhere between Apalachicola, Fla., and Mobile, Ala., sometime tonight. It warned of hurricane winds near the center of the storm and of dangerous high tides all along the coastline.

Hurricane warnings, flown from Cedar Keys to Pensacola along the Florida Gulf Coast during the day, were extended westward from here to Mobile late this afternoon. Storm warnings were continued up from Mobile to the mouth of the Mississippi River and from Cedar Keys to Tarpon Springs, Fla.

Rain squalls, blustery winds and falling barometers were reported all along the coast during the afternoon. The tide at Apalachicola, exposed port and oyster fishing town, swept through the streets for blocks around the waterfront and overflowed the Apalachicola River through miles of marshlands.

Water-fronts property and shipping were prepared for the storm. The naval air station here quartered more than 200 planes in safe hangers. Fort Barracks, on the mainland, boarded up for the blow and Fort Pickens, at the entrance to the harbor, was evacuated.

Waterspouts to Hit Conneaut.

Conneaut, Ohio, July 30 (AP).—Two towering waterspouts, lashing wildly from side to side, raced shoreward from Lake Erie today, caused slight property damage and endangered many of Conneaut's 10,000 citizens.

Veteran lake men said the first extended "3,000 or 4,000 feet in the air" and the second "well over 1,000 feet." An interval of an hour separated them.

One took a circular 2-mile route over the land, the other spent itself in a lakeside park. The first ripped a porch off one home, demolished chicken coops and sheds and shattered the windows of a score of houses.

It hovered for nearly 20 minutes over the city, twisting and whirling like a dervish, one observer said.

District to Impound Autos Left Parked Illegally at Night

If you park illegally after 6 p. m. you had better stop the practice. For Maj. Ernest W. Brown issued an order yesterday that the impounding crane will be operated 24 hours a day starting August 2.

Maj. Brown said that often during the night when there is a serious accident or a stolen automobile is found abandoned there is no way to remove the car.

He also warned motorists who are in the habit of parking so as to obstruct traffic at night that their cars will be hauled to the nearest precinct station.

Nunoca Reported Found Off Yucatan

Vera Cruz, Mexico, July 30 (AP).—A radio message received tonight from the port captain at Progreso, Yucatan, said the United States Coast Guard vessel C. G. MacLane had found the English ship Nunoca, missing since July 4.

The report said the C. G. MacLane was towing the Nunoca to Progreso. It gave no further details.

On Wednesday the Coast Guard at Jacksonville, Fla., ordered two cutters to investigate a report from the port captain of Vera Cruz that the Nunoca was lying damaged in the Gulf of Mexico west of the Yucatan peninsula.

The cutters Yeaton and Vigilant, which had been participating in the hunt for the Nunoca since it was lost after leaving Cayman Island, in the West Indies, were sent to that section.

Their Marriage Revealed

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS D. SCHALL.

Widow of Maj. Coupal Is Wed To Son of Late Senator Schall

The marriage of Mrs. Martha Lillian Coupal, widow of Maj. J. F. Coupal, White House physician during the Coolidge Administration, to Thomas D. Schall, jr., 26, son of the late blind Senator from Minnesota, was brought to light yesterday.

Peculiarly enough, the extemporaneous announcement was a by-product of an auction sale at which the 7-acre estate of the former Senator, located at Berwyn Heights, Md., was offered for sale.

The bride, who met young Schall several years ago while he was being treated by Maj. Coupal for injuries received in an auto accident, said she and "Doug" were married July 18 by a justice of the peace in Carmody, Vt.

"No," declared the blonde bride, "it was not an elopement. Both families knew about it. We intended making a formal announcement, but have delayed until things could become more settled."

The "discovery" of the wedding was made by newspapermen when the auctioneer, J. C. Bowden, made reference to "Mrs. Schall, jr."

Daughter of wealthy Edward Wilfert, Boston business executive, the young Mrs. Schall was graduated from the Boston Normal School shortly before the World War. Later she taught in the graded schools of that city.

In 1916 she became the bride of Maj. Coupal, who at that time was preparing to leave for France to take charge of the Twenty-sixth Division Field Hospital.

When, in 1924, he was named to succeed Brig. Gen. Sawyer as White House physician under the Coolidge regime, Maj. and Mrs. Coupal came to live in Washington.

It was in 1930 that "Doug" Schall, then a midshipman at the Naval

$1,726,000,000 In Bonus Paid; Effect in Doubt

Trade, Deposits Unaffected, Officials Are Baffled; Many Retain Bonds.

By Robert C. Albright.

In one of the most amazing financial transactions on record, Uncle Sam has paid out $1,726,482,950 in bonus bonds to veterans, redeemed $1,096,515,700 of them with cash, and disbursed $77,971,891 in jingling odd amounts of less than $50.

And still he doesn't know what has become of the money. The payment has not been reflected to any appreciable extent in retail trade. The banks report that not nearly as much has come back to them in deposits as the Treasury expected. And yet there is a lingering suspicion that the cash is not still burning holes in veterans' pockets.

Out of 3,518,191 eligible veterans, 3,301,990 have applied for their bonds and received them, leaving only 216,201 who have been too modest or have simply forgotten to ask. A thousand or so bonds involving legal complications still are tied up in the Treasury.

With this gigantic transaction virtually completed, the Treasury yesterday estimated it will involve an ultimate payment to veterans of

Pershing Fraud Suspect Lodged In District Jail

Alfred M. Layton, who jumped a $10,000 bond in 1934 after a Federal grand jury had indicted him on charges of using the United States mails fraudulently in the widely publicized Gen. Pershing portrait-bust promotion, was in the custody of the United States marshal's office last night.

The accused promoter was hurried here by automobile yesterday after police apprehended him Wednesday night in Atlantic City, N. J. This time he is held under a $50,000 bond.

Layton's arrest climaxed a search of two and a half years in which Department of Justice agents and police throughout the country cooperated. His case had gained Nation-wide attention because of the charges that many of the country's leading financiers and business men had been victimized by his scheme.

These men had contributed, according to the Government, a total of $11,000 for the purchase of a fine bust of Gen. John J. Pershing, to be presented to the Nation in tribute to the World War general.

Mary Astor, Sobbing on Stand, Says Husband Tortured Child

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 30.—Sobbing, Mary Astor, film beauty, testified tonight that her former husband, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, shook their small daughter so hard that "her teeth rattled."

Miss Astor testified in her trial for custody of the child, 4-year-old Marylyn.

Referring to the period from April 12, 1935, until the following October, when Marylyn was with her mother following her husband's divorce, Roland Rich Woolley, counsel for Miss Astor, asked:

"Did he ever try to discipline the child?"

"Frequently," replied Miss Astor. "He was always talking to her and jerking her to her feet roughly. It seemed there was practically always something wrong."

"How did he discipline her?"

Miss Astor burst into tears and said:

"He'd shake her so hard that her teeth rattled and cut her lips. Then he'd spank her and there would be bruise marks on her little body."

The Spanish Revolt.

Two thousand Loyalist troops were reported slain last night in a surprise rebel attack in the mountains 20 miles outside Zaragoza, insurgent stronghold. The rebels waylaid a government force of about 6,000. The survivors fled.

At Madrid the Leftists took over the merchant marine and enlisted shop girls in a desperate move to stem the rebellion. Fighting continued in the mountain passes guarding the capital.

The rebel radio station at Seville, it was reported, claimed in broadcast that the Madrid government had asked Gen. Francisco Franco for a truce to negotiate the surrender of Madrid.

Seizure of American industrial plants was denied by the Catalan government.

At Paris there were indications France may supply arms to the Spanish Loyalists because of fear of a new dictatorship.

Three planes in a squadron of six Italian bombers were forced down in French Morocco. Three airmen were killed. The air fleet reportedly was on a 'mission' to rebel headquarters in Spanish Morocco.

A party of 50 Americans and 100 Britons succeeded in leaving Madrid for Valencia by train.

Loyalists Ambushed.

By the United Press.

Perpignan, Franco-Spanish Frontier, July 30.—Rebel machine gunners ambushed a column of Popular Front militia and killed 2,000 in a narrow canyon north of Zaragoza, according to reports trickling over the border today.

It was reported also that Barcelona is on the verge of a civil war within a civil war with Catalon government forces 25,000 strong massing to fight defiant Communists, anarchists and Socialists who have proclaimed a Soviet regime.

The Barcelona situation was reported so tense that British and American authorities have urged all their nationals to leave at once.

Plan to Pillage Homes.

A fearful battle wholly independent of the general civil war in Spain reportedly impended in Barcelona because the avowed Reds have occupied most of the city's factories and announced their intention of pillaging homes and shops of the rich.

Reports of the massacre near Zaragoza declared that after a four days' forced march from Barcelona the Catalon Loyalists approached within 20 miles of Zaragoza, where the insurgent Gen. Caballero waited with machine guns in mountain defiles hanging over the deep canyon through which the militia had to pass.

With his positions studded with machine guns the rebel commander attacked at down while the Catalons were resting.

Travel in Three Columns.

The estimate of 2,000 dead was based on the fact that the Catalons were traveling in three columns totaling 6,000 men. One was reported annihilated. This was expected further to delay Loyalist attempts to take Zaragoza, major rebel stronghold, by force.

Reports of the situation in Barcelona said the autonomous government under Louis Companys, president of the Catalonian Generalalidad, has mustered 25,000 police, loyal soldiers, civic guards and assault guards to make war on the Communist extremists and anarchists who have precipitated a reign of terror and confiscation.

Roosevelt Foes To Plan Party, Edmunds Says

Aug. 7 Parley in Detroit to Study Organization of Group, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Wequetonsing, Mich., July 30.—Sterling E. Edmunds, St. Louis, Mo., attorney, said here today he believed formation of a party of anti-Roosevelt Democrats will be discussed at a meeting scheduled in Detroit August 7.

Edmunds sent out invitations last week for the conference, acting in conjunction with James A. Reed, the former Missouri Democratic Senator.

Edmunds declined to say who had accepted invitations and emphasized that the meeting was in no sense a convention. "Nothing may be accomplished," he said. "It may be that the conferees will simply decide to vote as their consciences dictate and let it go at that. On the other hand, there may be a decision on a definite plan of action."

Edmunds said he had not invited former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, but that perhaps Reed had.

Chicago, July 29 (AP).—Opening Chicago headquarters for the Republican Senatorial campaigns today, Senator John G. Townsend, jr., of Delaware, asserted "decisive" Republican gains in the Senate would be registered in the November election.

Senator Townsend, chairman of the Republican senatorial committee, said it was probable his party would gain in Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, South Dakota, West Virginia, Massachusetts and Colorado.

Appointment of Mrs. Grace B. Reynolds, of Cambridge City, Ind., as Western director of Republican Women's activities was announced tonight by John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the national committee.

Mrs. Reynolds is the Republican national committeewoman from Indiana.

Separate Races Hinted.

Columbus, Ohio, July 30 (AP).—The Ohio State Journal says Ohio Roosevelt leaders agreed at a conference today that President Roosevelt's Ohio re-election campaign would be waged separately from that of Gov. Martin L. Davey.

Participating in the conference, the paper says, were United States Senator Bulkley, of Cleveland; Undersecretary of the Interior Charles West and Charles Sawyer, Democratic national committeeman from Ohio.

Gov. Davey announced several weeks ago after a trip to Washington that the Ohio campaign would be continued "all under one tent."

Ickes to Answer Landon.

Secretary Ickes said yesterday he would reply in a radio address Monday night to Gov. Alf M. Landon's speech accepting the Republican Presidential nomination.

He told his press conference:

"I was very much interested in Gov. Landon's characterization of himself as a practical progressive and I am going to philosophize about the practical part—I know what progressive means."

William Hard, radio commentator for the Republican National Committee, said last night that returning prosperity is not reaching the farmer and worker.

Hard said:

"Prosperity is returning, according to the New Dealers, but the question is—whose prosperity? The answer is—the prosperity in large part of the people whom the President calls economic royalists.

"The index of stock market prices three years ago was 41. Now it is along about 120. Splendid for the money changers.

"But how about working people? I will use the Government's own figures. Three years ago there were some 4,000,000 cases on the relief rolls of the United States. Now there are some 5,000,000, an increase of 1,000,000."

Governor General and Premier Mackenzie King will be the possibility of co-operative development by the two countries of hydro-electric power, both at Quoddy and on the St. Lawrence River. Two years ago the United States Senate defeated the St. Lawrence waterway treaty looking to mutual development of the international rapids section of the river for power purposes.

The President said after a picnic on the eastern shore of Campobello yesterday that "Quoddy will be completed." Just how, he did not make plain. Congress refused to specifically authorize the project at the last session or to appropriate further funds for it.

Only 1,200 workers of the original 5,000 are now at the model village near here, built at a cost of around $1,500,000.

Before the week is out, Mr. Roosevelt expects to settle the question as to utilization of the village after all the workers are gone.

If Congress again refuses to grant authority for the project's construction, the President said yesterday, the 5,000 originally at work would have to be placed on other relief jobs.

Landon Letter to Thomas Is Believed Check to Labor Leaders' Charges.

By Franklyn Waltman

GOV. ALF. M. LANDON, by his letter to Norman Thomas, the Socialist Presidential candidate, amplifying his attitude toward the relationship of labor to employers, undoubtedly has taken the fire out of these labor leaders who enthusiastically undertook last week to dismiss the Republican Presidential nominee as an advocate of the open shop.

WALTMAN.

This was indicated by the pause which the letter to Mr. Thomas gave them. Men who a week ago eagerly pounced on the Landon labor pronouncement in his acceptance speech even before the echo of his voice had died away, yesterday reserved comment on the elaboration of the first declaration.

No doubt within a day or two John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, and the non-partisan George L. Berry will think up something unfavorable to say about the second Landon statement. But it will be more difficult now for them to scream "open shop" at the Kansan than it was last week. They will not be able to distort the Landon words into advocacy of an "open shop" as easily as they did last week.

* * *

Gov. Landon's declaration on labor in his acceptance speech was clear enough to any reasonable, open-minded person. He did not advocate an open shop in that declaration and if his words are carefully studied that will be seen.

In that speech Gov. Landon asserted that "I firmly believe that labor has the right to protect" the position and rewards of prosperity to which it is entitled "by organizing in labor unions." Surely that declaration cannot be interpreted as anything but an indorsement of the right of labor to organize.

The Kansan went on to assert American workers had improved their working conditions "through self-organizations." He said that to him the right of labor to organize meant "the right of employes to join any type of union they prefer, whether it covers their plant, their craft or their industry." Surely none would deny the worker that freedom of choice and action. But then we come to the controversial point of the declaration.

"It means," added Gov. Landon, "that in the absence of a union contract, any employe has an equal right to join a union or to refuse to join a union.

"Under all circumstances, so states the Republican platform, employes are to be free from interference from any source, which means, as I read it, entire freedom from coercion or intimidation by the employer, any fellow employe or any other person."

It is this part of the declaration that some labor leaders interpret as meaning advocacy of an open shop. They ignore entirely the phrase "in the absence of a union contract." It qualifies what follows A closed shop comes about through "a union contract," and until that is signed it is not a closed shop. It is Gov. Landon's contention that until such a step is taken the workers in a given shop should be free from coercion from employer as well as fellow-employe.

* * *

That remains the Landon attitude. It was not modified by his letter to Mr. Thomas. But it did clarify the Kansan's attitude. He explained there was nothing in what he said to suggest he favored any abridgement of the right of free speech or free assembly—that he favored the protection by the public authorities of the right of the workers "to meet among themselves or with others of their own choice, to promote organization, with complete freedom from interference from anyone whatsoever."

"This necessarily includes the right of a labor union," he added, "to promote by lawful and proper means the organization of an unorganized industry, which includes the right to send in an organizer."

* * *

In view of the amplification of the Landon declaration, the pro-Roosevelt labor leaders cannot argue that the Kansan is opposed to peaceable efforts of unions to persuade workers to join them. They cannot argue logically, and within the text of the declaration, that Gov. Landon is advocating open shops.

They cannot, but without seeking to support their argument with logic, they probably will continue to yell "open shop." They will because nothing that Gov. Landon might say would win a favorable word from Mr. Lewis. He closed his mind to Gov. Landon last spring when he declared for the re-election of President Roosevelt and promised a contribution of his union's funds for that purpose several months before a Republican nominee was selected.

Thus in this controversy what Mr. Lewis or Mr. Berry says about the Landon declaration should be accepted—not at its face value—but as statements coming from partisans. They have committed themselves and to do anything except assail the Landon position and applaud the Roosevelt stand would be a confession of mistaken judgment on their part.

Moreover, as a labor leader, Mr. Lewis undoubtedly sincerely believes it is quite all right for unionists to coerce and intimidate nonunion workers—but quite wrong for employers to coerce and intimidate their workers. It is a matter of business with Mr. Lewis.

But the worker who wishes to reserve for himself some freedom of action and choice probably regards the Landon attitude as a reasonable one.

Labor Reaction Mixed on Letter Of Gov. Landon

Organized labor here yesterday received word of Gov. Alf Landon's broadened labor stand with mingled feelings, but declined to comment immediately for publication.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, merely said:

"I think my position in not commenting when Gov. Landon delivered his acceptance speech now has been vindicated."

He was believed to be slapping at President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, who is in conflict with Green over craft versus industrial unionization of labor, and has denounced Landon's labor stand after the Kansan's acceptance speech.

Prepares Statement.

Lewis had nothing to say yesterday, but it was learned he has prepared a statement on Landon's letter to Norman Thomas, for release tomorrow. The mine leader is expected to continue his espousal of Roosevelt.

Green's position was described as puzzling Always a Democrat in politics, he has seen Lewis, his bitter rival, grow in favor in the Roosevelt Administration and aggressively take up the cudgels for the New Deal's return. Landon's position, as outlined yesterday, observers said, would make it easier for Green to refrain from opposition to the Kansan.

"At some other time, more opportune, I will have something to say," Green told reporters yesterday.

Asked what he considered a "more opportune" time, Green replied:

Berry to Talk Today.

Maj. George L. Berry, of Labor's Non-partisan League, was not in Washington yesterday, but it was announced he will hold a press conference today at 2 p. m. Like Lewis, whose views on the New Deal he largely shares, he is expected to attack the Landon statement.

At Berry's office yesterday it was said Landon's discussion of his calling out of troops in the lead and zinc mine strike in Kansas in June and July, 1935, "did not square" with a resolution adopted by the Kansas State Labor Forum in June, opposing Landon's candidacy. A copy of this resolution was released by the league.

It said in part that "Gov. Landon at the request of the mine operators sent troops into this district when order could have been kept by any one peace officer" and that Landon "ordered these troops stationed in our towns and at the mines until the mines were opened and operating, when 80 per cent of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union were still out on strike and 75 per cent of our members are still on strike."

Text of Landon Labor Letter

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 30.—The text of Gov. Landon's letter to Norman Thomas, on his labor views, follows:

Dear Mr. Thomas:

I have received your letter of July 24, and its courtesy and candor merit an answer in the same spirit, although, as you say, it is rather unusual to discuss questions of this nature in a personal letter.

You have asked for further comment on the statement in my acceptance speech that says: "Under all circumstances, so states the Republican platform, employes are to be free from interference from any source, which means, as I read it, entire freedom from coercion or intimidation by the employer, any fellow employe or other person."

In your letter you state: "The history of the American labor movement shows that repeatedly employers' organizations like the National Manufacturers Association have used the phrase—free from interference from any source—to mean a denial of the right of a labor union, or labor unions, actively to promote the organization of an unorganized factory or an unorganized industry. It is absurd to talk about labor's right to organize if in every factory workers more or less at the mercy of the owners of their jobs must organize spontaneously without any help from their fellows. Is this the interpretation to be given to your words?"

In my statement, which you quote, there is nothing to suggest that I am in favor of infringing in any way the right of free speech or free assembly. I am opposed to any such infringement. The members have the right to meet among themselves or with others of their own choice to promote organization, with complete freedom from interference from anyone whatsoever. The workers should be fully protected in this right by the public authorities. This necessarily includes the right of a labor union to promote by lawful and proper means the organization of an unorganized industry, which includes the right to send in an organizer.

In connection with the only serious labor disturbance that has occurred in Kansas, during my term as governor, in Cherokee County in June and July, 1935, I acceded to a request, jointly preferred by the sheriff and prosecuting attorney of Cherokee County that I send troops to maintain order. I instructed the troops through the adjutant general of Kansas to maintain order, to disarm all armed civilians, including the armed guards employed by the smelter and mine operators, and those that may have been armed in behalf of the labor groups.

Guards of mine and smelter properties carrying deputy constable commissions were obliged to give up these deputy commissions. They were not permitted to carry arms off the private property where they were employed as watchmen. The troops were further instructed to preserve the peace, and secure the execution of all laws of the State of Kansas. Gunmen from other States who had made it a practice to threaten striking workers in Kansas were forced to stay out of the State.

The troops, however, were directed not to interfere with labor meetings and other activities of the strikers, so long as they were peaceably conducted. This included picketing, and both meetings and pickets were protected from possible violence of any kind.

My action in this instance protected the workers in the right of free speech and free assembly.

Yours very truly,

ALF M. LANDON,
Governor.

Landon gave out his letter to Thomas at a press conference. The Kansan's first Eastern swing, scheduled for late August, will take him into the Mahoning Valley steel and coal area of Pennsylvania and Ohio. John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization has sent labor organizers into this and other sections in an effort to organize the giant steel industry.

Receives Peace Group.

With Republican interest centering on the Chicago notification ceremonies for Col. Frank Knox, Landon's running mate, the Governor's appointment list was light. At noon half a hundred visitors representing the Peoples Mandate to End War were presented by Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas.

Short talks, urging Federal policies to preserve peace, were made by Capper and members of the group.

Girl Trapeze Artist, 23, Falls 50 Feet to Death

Salisbury Beach, Mass., July 30 (AP).—Miss Mitzi Reilmut, 23, trapeze performer, plunged 50 feet to her death during the final moments of her act here today.

The girl was swinging at high speed by a strop clenched in her teeth when she dropped. Police said the strap broke. The girl, one of a troupe billed as the four Albanis, lived in West Englewood, N. J.

20 Million Loss In Trust Assets Traced by SEC

Charge Firm's 'Hands Were Tied' by Bankers Disputed at Inquiry.

By the United Press.

An assertion that an investment trust company lost heavily in "syndicate" stock operations in 1930 because its "hands were tied" by closely affiliated bankers was disputed at a Securities and Exchange Commission hearing yesterday.

The dispute arose after SEC Counsel David Schenker revealed how Interstate Equities, Inc., lost more than $2,700,000 in such stock deals, as he sought to trace a shrinkage of more than $20,000,000 in the concern's assets between 1929 and 1932.

Schenker charged that Bancamerica-Blair Corporation, which sponsored Interstate Equities, had "tied the hands" of Interstate by preventing the concern from disposing of stock to prevent losses.

"Leniency Is Custom."

Hunter S. Marston, New York financier and former president of Bancamerica-Blair, reported that "perhaps your definition is technically correct about tying the hands but the custom is to be lenient in such cases."

Interstate Equities is one of numerous investment trusts, later taken over by Equity Corporation, which figured in a one-time $8,000,000 business. The SEC inquiry was ordered by Congress to determine if regulatory legislation is needed to protect stockholders' interests in the investment trust field.

After sketching, on Wednesday, stock deals through which Interstate assertedly lost approximately $1,000,000, Schenker inquired yesterday into "syndicate" operations projecting mergers involving Tidewater and Sinclair oil interests, the General Foods Corporation and the St. Louis-San Francisco Railroad.

Losses Are Noted.

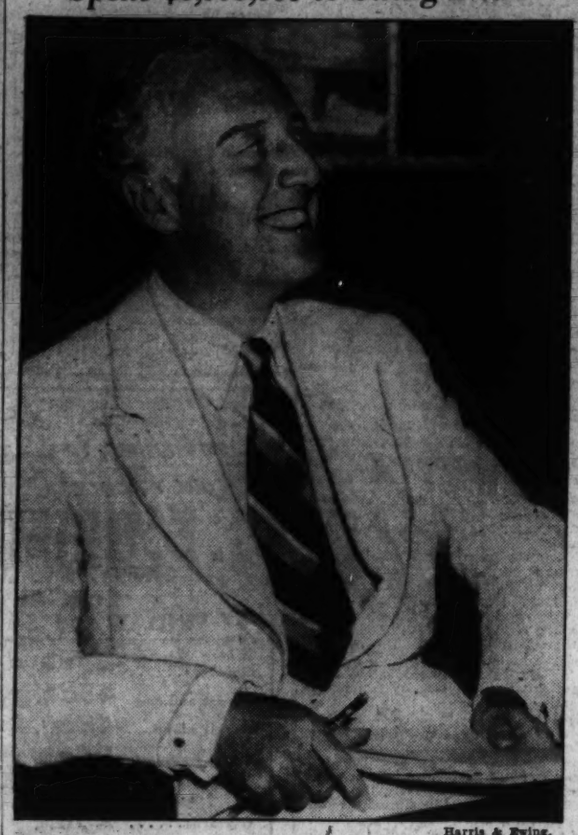
Interstate lost $800,000 in the oil deal; $1,432,600 in the food company stock transaction, and $470,000 in the railway deal, the SEC attorney brought out in questioning Marston.

Promoters of the $23,000,000 proposed oil company merger in 1930 spent nearly $8,000,000, Schenker revealed. He developed that Mission Securities, Ltd., agreed in the deal to acquire 1,978,000 shares of Tidewater Associated Oil common stock from Standard Oil of New Jersey for $23,000,000, to be paid in installments.

Mission Securities had signed a secret agreement to sell the stock to Bancamerica-Blair, the questioning revealed. Standard was to keep the stock until it was paid for in full, which never was done. The original $7,715,000 down payment was lost when the transaction failed to materialize.

Bancamerica - Blair, Interstate, Chase Securities, Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation and Petroleum Corporation of America participated in the syndicate, Schenker brought out. Interstate, controlled by Bancamerica-Blair, put up $800,000 of the defaulted down payment, the testimony revealed.

Spent $8,000,000 to Swing Deal



Harris & Ewing.

Hunter S. Marston, New York financier, who was former president of Bancamerica-Blair Corporation, yesterday told how that firm made a secret but successful effort to acquire Tidewater Associated Oil for Sinclair Consolidated Oil in 1930, at cost of $8,000,000. Marston was among witnesses appearing at Securities and Exchange Commission hearing.

2,000 Reported Slain

growing threat of Fascist dictatorship.

To all appearances the big push was on.

Shopgirls, bullfights, mountaineers, laborers—all were called to fight for the republic. The merchant marine was taken over to bolster the Spanish navy.

Slipping through rigid censorship came reports 2,000 Loyalists were slain in ambush while they marched toward rebellious Zaragoza. Other columns of Leftist troops retreated.

Rebels broadcast Valencia's garrison had joined their cause, pushing their grip into new territory on the Mediterranean coast; the Leftist government issued an official denial.

American refugees were fleeing toward Valencia, unaware whether they would find liberal or rebel forces in control, to board the United States warship Quincy.

Government conscription of foreign industry and banks was reported, but was denied by officials. Barcelona was tense. Fleeing Americans said Loyalists had seized automobile and other factories. Disorder was rampant.

At Burgos, a rebel provisional government informed Spanish diplomatic and consular representatives throughout the world of their "dismissal."

(Leftist ambassadors in the Argentine, Italy and Germany resigned, indicating belief rebels may control the homeland.)

New Victory Claimed.

The lofty peaks of Guadarramas held the fate of Madrid. Loyalists said rebels retreated under a barrage of artillery fire. Fascists, on the other hand, claimed new victory there and asserted forces were gathering to assault the narrow passes leading to the capital.

The government claimed capture of the junction town, Villanueva Delaserena, 80 miles from the Portuguese frontier. This opened a new outlet from the capital, with its potential source of food.

Loyalists hoped to gain support of rural regions between Madrid and Badajoz to sever north and south sectors of the rebel army.

Alonso Mallol, director of general security, resigned and was replaced by Leftist Manuel Munoz, Cadiz deputy. Jose Valdivia, director general under the government of Alejandro Lerroux, was arrested by Madrid Leftists today.

The crash of a rebel airplane carrying arms to Spanish Morocco was reported.

A Norwegian freighter reported 11 bombs were dropped by rebels near the ship Ceuta in the Gibraltar Straits, but none scored a hit.

(France, watching signs of increasing Fascist strength, indicated arms may be supplied to the republic to aid the fight.)

The battle for Zaragoza marked heaviest fighting of the day. The Loyalists were said to have been ambushed in a pass about 20 miles outside the northern city.

Rebels had mounted machine guns on the hills guarding the pass and fired in bursts as loyalists marched in. The government sent warplanes and heavy new forces of troops to aid in renewed assault.

Twelve laborers, including French and German citizens, were reported slain by Government militia marching from Gerona to support the Barcelona troops.

Loyalists set up a new government for Guipuzcoa Province at San Sebastian. Liberal forces maintained their artillery fire between San Sebastian and Irun and reported recapture of Tolosa, nearby.

The Catalonian cabinet, in extraordinary session after denying reports of seizure of foreign factories, said the autonomous government will be enlarged to include representatives of all Leftist parties and labor unions.

President Luiz Companys, informed sources said, will delegate his executive powers to Juan Casanovas, president of Parliament.

French Aid Indicated.

Paris, July 30 (A.P.).—France, worried lest a new dictatorship appear on her southern border, indicated tonight she may supply arms to aid Spain's Leftist republic.

The cabinet's declination thus far to refuse war supplies "is not final," Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos told the Chamber of Deputies. "It depends on what other nations do."

Reports were heard in French political circles that Gen. Francisco Franco, rebel leader, had obtained a new trimotored plane from Germany and two small seaplanes from Italy.

France already has discussed with England possible repercussions of the Spanish War among Arab inhabitants of Morocco and Tangier, the foreign minister asserted, but reached no decision.

Delbos indicated the government might be "forced" to supply the Spanish Liberals with arms to keep Fascism from encircling France.

Madrid shipped $1,500,000 in gold to France by air today, and French newspapers reflected suspicion two earlier shipments were for purchase of supplies.

Auto Plants Seized.

Marseille, July 30 (A.P.).—Seizure of Ford Motor Co. and General Motors plants by Spanish Loyalists at Barcelona was reported by refugees reaching here today.

(The Catalan government issued official denial any American factories had been conscripted.)

All General Motors automobiles were requisitioned to transport troops, the refugees said, and there was much destruction of the company's property.

William Butler, General Motors executive, refused to discuss the reports of conscription of the Barcelona plant, but did say "nothing was damaged" and the offices "were being guarded."

secretary at Geneva," Pickus said. "I also did some writing."

United States District Attorney Emerich B. Freed, Pickus said, called him to his office.

"He suggested that maybe I ought to stop telephoning and writing to foreign diplomats," explained Pickus, president of a Cleveland oil company.

"It seems there's some sort of Federal law which says no person can discuss with foreign attaches or governments the policies of the United States Government."

State Department officials at Washington reported the old Logan act prohibits "any American citizen from counseling, advising or assisting any foreign government or agency thereof with respect to any matter of difference between the United States and that Government."

Pickus said he was informed "there's a penalty of three years and a $5,000 fine."

"Since I'm a law-abiding citizen and respect the United States Government," he added, "I shall in the future refrain from such discussions."

He observed, however, that "if conditions not relating to United States policies or treaties warrant a long-distance call, I may put one in."

On April 1, he talked with Saito concerning the Russian-Japanese situation. He sought the ambassador's opinion as to whether war was imminent.

"He assured me there wouldn't be any war," Pickus reported.

Pickus claimed he was given similar assurance two weeks later by Troyanovsky.

Later, he called Geneva for Eden and when told the diplomat was busy talked with the secretary.

"He was very nice until I said Great Britain had put her foot down in Palestine like Mussolini in Ethiopia," Pickus related. "The minute I mentioned Mussolini's name he grew distant. The call cost me $36.20."

Italian Planes Crash En Route To Spain; 3 Die

Were Among Squadron of 6 Declared Headed for 'Mission' to Rebels.

By the Associated Press.

Oran, Algeria, July 30.—Three of a squadron of six Italian bombing planes, which French authorities said were flying to Spanish Morocco, were forced down today in French territory. Three fliers were killed.

Authorities said members of the six-man crew of one of the planes, forced down in French Morocco, asserted the squadron was going on a "special mission" to Nador, Spanish Morocco, south of the Spanish rebel headquarters at Melilla.

This plane, which landed 3 miles from the mouth of the Moulouya River when its gasoline was exhausted, bore no identification marks on its wings and no number, officials said.

Another Italian plane, believed to be a unit of the same squadron, was forced down in the sea 50 miles off Oran. Ships were rushing to rescue three survivors reported to be clinging to the wings. A Belgian commercial plane flying to Marseille, France, from Oran, sighted the plane in the water.

The plane which crashed at Saidia on the Algerian-Moroccan frontier carried a load of arms and ammunitions, it was reported.

Three of the occupants were killed and two were injured.

The squadron took off from Sardinia, Italian-owned island in the Mediterranean.

Truce Offer Reported.

Hendaye, France, July 30 (A.P.).—The Spanish rebel radio station at Seville, in a broadcast here tonight, claimed the Madrid government had asked Gen. Francisco Franco for a truce to negotiate for the surrender of Madrid. This was not confirmed by any other sources.

Rebel troops regained Oyarzun tonight after four hours of heavy fighting, to strengthen their grip of the northern sector.

A thousand rebel troops, rushed from Pamplona, bolstered battered Carlists, who had lost Oyarzun yesterday and provided the impetus for victory.

While the battle raged, Leftists executed Gen. Carresco, former military governor of San Sebastian, with 20 officers of the Loyola garrison, refugees said.

Leftists at Irun said Gen. Carresco joined rebel troops in the Loyola barracks and remained with them until they surrendered unconditionally to Popular Front troops yesterday.

Navy Will Destroy Old Mine in Bay

A Spanish-American War mine found in the Potomac River after the spring floods will be destroyed in Chesapeake Bay Monday.

The mine, which has lain on the District wharf since it was found by the skipper of the Steamship Potomac, was taken to the Navy Yard yesterday. No one knows if it is still dangerous after having been submerged so long.

The mine will be shipped from the Navy Yard by the Navy mine sweeper Commorant. It will be sunk in deep water to end any danger of it ever exploding and doing any damage.

Train Refused U. S. Nationals In Madrid Area

Foreigners in Madrid, including 160 Americans, have been denied a special train to transport them to the seacoast, the United States Embassy in Madrid informed the State Department yesterday.

Eric C. Wendelin, in charge of the embassy, reported that in reply to the joint request of the Diplomatic Corps, the Spanish government replied the movement of troops and supplies made the furnishing of a special train and a guard impossible. They were further informed that regular trains were running and they could be used.

Wendelin indicated the latter suggestion would be followed and that an attempt would be made to transport refugees to Alicante or Valencia, on the southern coast. Reports that Valencia was in the hands of the rebels may prevent carrying out this plan.

The embassy told the State Department that published reports the Spanish government has confiscated much American property are untrue. He said some automobiles owned by Americans had been requisitioned for war purposes. He added there has been no confiscation of bank deposits, but that there is a moratorium on loans and a limitation on withdrawals.

Consul Lynn W. Franklin at Barcelona reported the president of the Catalonia had informed him it was impossible to guarantee protection to Americans in Barcelona. Nevertheless, he added, no Americans have been killed or injured, and American property has not been damaged.

All normal means of transportation and local communication are paralyzed, Franklin said. He said there was little control over armed groups who were patroling the city recklessly. He said the French consul general is evacuating his nationals by ship and motor caravan.

Navy's Pioneer In Radio Field Retires Today

John W. Scanlin Served 45 Years; Installed Arlington Station.

The Navy will lose one of its pioneer electricians and radio communications experts today when 62-year-old John W. Scanlin retires after almost 45 years of service.

One of the first men in the Navy to gain a chief electrician's rating, Scanlin, who lives at 935 Fifteenth street southeast, was in charge of the naval radio station at Arlington, Va., when it was constructed in 1912.

He installed the first permanent electrical system on a battleship, the first arc apparatus to be used by the Navy and set up the equipment that enabled the Army to maintain communication with United States ships at Vera Cruz during the Mexican punitive expedition in 1916. Yesterday in recognition of his many years of service, Rear Admiral Charles E. Courtney, head of naval communications, sent him a letter of commendation.

Born in South Ardmore, Pa., on July 29, 1874, Scanlin enlisted in the Navy in 1891. When the Spanish-American War broke out and the then unprecedented extent of United States Navy maneuvers demanded improved systems of communication, Scanlin was one of the men chosen as chief electrician—the first in the history of the Navy.

It was not until 1902 that the office of naval communications was established. Scanlin was brought in from the fleet to serve in the newly organized office. For a year he journeyed between Washington and Annapolis testing the various types of apparatus that were submitted by American and European manufacturers. When these tests were completed Scanlin was chosen to make the first permanent installation on a battleship.

He continued as one of the Navy's pioneers in the radio field, being in charge of the testing of the equipment. In 1911, he was assigned to the bureau of engineering for duty in the naval laboratory of the Bureau of Standards. The following year he became electrician in charge of the naval radio station being built at Arlington.

Scanlin carried on all the tests at the station until regular schedules were established. At the time the Arlington radio station was the only high-powered station in the country.

The drink that converted the Colonel

LONG YEARS IN INDIA had peppered the Colonel with strange beliefs. "Hot weather demands high seasoning" was his favorite motto. His particular dish was a curry hot enough to melt gold teeth—even his iced drinks seemed to sizzle.

When he visited America, someone gave him a Tom Collins mixed with Fleischmann's Gin. It was a cool, smooth drink—the gin enhanced the subtle tang of the fruit, but didn't overpower it.

"Deuced smooth, you Americans!" was his only comment. Later he was discovered gazing lovingly at his diplomatic passport—which allowed him to salt away several cases of Fleischmann's Gin among his luggage.

Worker Tells Of Abduction By Black Clan

Kidnaped for Failing to Attend Meetings, He Says; Six Accused.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 30.—Robert Penland, steel factory worker, denied from the witness stand today that he had been flogged by the Black Legion for failing to attend meetings regularly, but admitted he had been escorted to an Oakland County field with what "felt like a gun at my back," and "warned" to be on hand at future sessions.

He was testifying at the trial of six Black Legion members charged with having kidnaped and flogged him.

As he took the stand in circuit court at the first trial to grow out of the Black Legion activities, five other men were arraigned on charges of having abducted and killed Silas Coleman, colored hod carrier, "just for the fun of it." The men were held for trial after pleas of innocent were entered for them.

The trial in the flogging case was without a jury, the defendants having waived that right. Besides Frederick A. Gulley, upon whose information the charges were based, the defendants are Earl Angstadt, Charles King, Thomas F. Cax, Harold Lawrence and Wilbur Robinson.

Asked why he did not report his abduction by the hooded band to the county prosecutor, Penland said:

"I was afraid of trouble for myself and my family."

In his early testimony Penland identified Gulley, Angstadt and Cox as the men who took him to the meeting. King, Lawrence and Robinson, he said, stood in an inner circle of men at the gathering in the Oakland County field.

The five men arraigned in the slaying of Coleman were Harvey Davis, called a "colonel" in the Black Legion; John Bannerman, James Roy Lorance, Charles Rouse and Ervin D. Lee. Their arrest followed a statement by Dayton Dean, confessed "executioner" of Charles A. Poole, whose death disclosed the Black Legion's existence and led to the arrest of nearly three score of men on charges ranging from flogging to murder.

William H. Guthrie, who printed Black Legion literature in his home, and whose wife was beaten unconscious June 17 after she revealed activities of the legion and its women's auxiliary, told Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea today he was flogged because he refused to oust his German-born mother-in-law from his home.

Guthrie is held on a charge of conspiracy to riot in connection with the burning of a Communist camp in Oakland County.

Guthrie said he was compelled to take the legion oath after he was lured to a meeting on the pretext it was a church smoker. He said he also was instructed to discharge his Catholic maid.

police said, he had posed for several weeks as a "Dr. Church." He was first recognized by Elmer Bell, Washington attorney.

Bell communicated with Isaac Jones, Layton's bondsman, who only two weeks ago paid the forfeited $10,000 bond. Jones, through James Conroy, his associate, called on the Atlantic City police to seize the man. Layton was lodged in the District Jail last night.

The return of Layton reopens a case that received Nation-wide publicity when it "broke" on January 22, 1934. Layton was under an indictment when he disappeared about six weeks later.

The scheme grew out of a plan projected by the late Maj. Gen. George O. Squier, friend of Pershing. The former engaged Layton to carry the project through, and left for Chicago to become a director of the Century of Progress Exposition.

The Government charges Layton did not restrict his solicitations for funds to the list of names Maj. Gen. Squier had given him. Instead, he circularized scores of prominent men, using the name of Squier and the "Pershing Memorial Portrait-Bust Committee," it is charged.

In Layton's files, authorities said, were found the names of men he had persuaded to serve on his "executive committee."

Guards Ousted After 3 at Trial Try to Escape

Accused Chicago Killers Slash One Before Their Capture.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 30.—Two deputy sheriffs were suspended tonight after three accused killers escaped from their custody in a criminal courts building elevator on the way to a murder trial.

The prisoners pulled crude daggers from their shoes, stabbed one of their guards and transferred their handcuffs to the deputies' wrists before spreading terror over five floors of the building with blackjacks and fists.

One court attache was knocked unconscious in the resulting chase, which ended in the capture of the fugitives and their return to trial on charges of killing a policeman.

The two deputies—Edward Tierney and Edward Wing—were ordered removed "for at least 10 days or until a complete investigation has been made" of the escape attempt.

A third deputy, Louis Green, also was suspended for an indirect part in the affair. He had opened the door of the elevator after the prisoners had taken control.

Their suspensions were ordered by Sheriff John Toman by long-distance telephone from his summer home in Wisconsin. He said he also wanted to find out why only two deputies were assigned to guard three such dangerous characters.

The recaptured prisoners—Frank (Bones) Korczykowski, 27; Andrew Bogaci, 28, and Paul Jenkot, 24—were placed in solitary confinement in the jail, where extreme precautions were taken against another escape or possible suicide attempts.

Plans to Give Aid to Blind Announced in Montgomery

U. S. to Reimburse County With 50 Per Cent of Outlay Under New Program; Studies of Services Needed Is Under Way.

Plans have been inaugurated by the Montgomery County Welfare Board to give service and financial aid to blind persons living in the county, officials of the board announced yesterday in Rockville. This is the latest feature of the social security act to be undertaken in the county and will be conducted under an arrangement that provides for a 50 per cent Federal reimbursement to the county.

An investigation is under way to determine eligibility and types of specialized services needed, with special attention paid to cases where the blindness may be alleviated.

The board is hopeful, according to Miss Dorothy A. Everson, executive secretary, that in some cases physical care may remedy the affliction. Later, educational services will be available to make the blind less dependent.

Co-operation with the Workshop for the Blind, which formerly was charged with the care of the blind, will be continued. At present ten person are receiving blind pensions in the county.

The welfare board will hold its annual meeting tonight at the Manor Club, Norbeck, Md., at which time a report will be made of the board's activities during the last year. A talk will be given by Frank Bane, director of the Federal Social Security Board.

Junior members of the Glen Echo-Cabin John Red Cross School have just completed 24 Christmas bags which will be distributed by the national Red Cross in their annual distribution of gifts to soldiers, sailors and marines in Government hospitals or on duty in foreign posts. Each bag contains 16 articles.

The work was done this year by Ruth Alley, Eileen Shepherd, Margaret Thompson, Marjory Shepherd and Nita Wilson. The bags will be on display Wednesday, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., at the home of Mrs. Mina Church Braun in Cabin John.

Plans for the county campaign on behalf of the candidacies of President Roosevelt and Representative David J. Lewis for reelection will be discussed at a Democratic organization meeting in the Bethesda County Building, August 6, State Senator Stedman Prescott announced yesterday in Rockville.

Representatives of the county Democratic organization committee, of which Senator Prescott is chairman, the Woman's Democratic Club and the United Young Men's Democratic Club will attend the meeting.

Luther F. Fowkes, of Washington, former assistant superintendent of the U street postoffice in Washington, was appointed superintendent of the Takoma Park postoffice yesterday. He succeeds Arthur G. Turner, who was transferred to the Truxton circle office.

The eighth annual carnival of the Hyattsville Volunteer Fire Department will open tonight at Mount View Park and will continue until August 8. Suppers will be served August 6 and 8.

John T. Lancaster, Colesville, Md., filed suit for an absolute divorce from Sarah Lancaster, of Takoma Park, Md., in the Circuit Court for Montgomery County at Rockville, Md., yesterday. According to the petition, the couple was married on March 25, 1925, at Washington, and have two children, Walter, 10 years old, and Gene, 9 years old.

Residents Flee Montana Fires, Shifted by Wind

Indian Mission Believed Safe Unless Flames Take New Course.

By the Associated Press.

Havre, Mont., July 30.—A shifting of wind carried flames away from historic old St. Paul's Indian Mission and the little mining town of Landusky today shortly after women and children had fled from the blazing mission canyon forests by airplanes, automobile and on foot.

Blowing steadily from the south, the wind spread the flames to the east of Landusky, home of the famous Little Ben gold mine, which previously seemed doomed as the fire raced through green forests, ravaging acres of valuable timber land.

Reports from the Fort Belknap Indian Reservation indicated the old mission, a school for Indian children maintained by Jesuit priests and Ursuline nuns, would escape damage unless there is another shift of winds. The mission remained deserted, however.

As the flames roared to within a few hundred yards of Landusky earlier today, more than 200 residents of the little village, perched on a ledge of the rugged Little Rocky Mountains, took to airplanes, automobiles, horses and foot to reach safety. All women and children were removed from the area.

The fire swept the site of the old August mine, one-time treasure spot of the Rockies, near Landusky, and some of the houses in the "Cabbage Patch," where a few Landusky miners lived, reports from the Indian agency at Hays said.

From Great Falls, Missoula and other cities new squads of fire fighters and more equipment was rushed into the territory to aid the more than 1,000 weary men who have been on the line for six days.

Relief Rolls Add 100 Pension Cases

One hundred new old age pension following, it was announced yesterday. trict relief rolls in July, bringing the total receiving such aid to 578, Paul Kirby, acting welfare director, disclosed yesterday.

Awards for the 478 cases in July amounted to $12,075.50, he said, while the grants in the 100 new cases totaled $2,629.50.

To the 34 aid-to-blind cases already on the rolls, 13 were approved this month. Awards for the 34 cases amounted to $801 and for the 13 cases to $291.30, a total of $1,092.30.

ing October 10, when the physician was given custody of the child.

During that period, she said, she paid all expenses for maintenance of Marlyn and her home. Her two servants, Fred and Vernice Hedad, the actress testified, were hired on the recommendation of Dr. Thorpe.

A recess was called at this point.

Earlier tonight, the name of George Kaufman was injected in the trial by an attorney.

"Do you know George Kaufman?" asked Joseph Anderson, Dr. Thorpe's attorney, in cross-examining Nellie Richardson, nursemaid to the child, Marlyn.

Wooley Overruled.

"Immaterial and merely an attempt to scandalize," he said.

Superior Judge Goodwin J. Knight overruled Wooley.

In an affidavit technically in evidence, Dr. Thorpe sets forth that his former wife, in writing, told of her love for "George."

Miss Richardson, who last night testified that several women visited Dr. Thorpe overnight in his home, was questioned concerning Miss Astor's activities as hostess to men.

"Has any man visited Miss Astor from May 1 until now?" asked Anderson.

"Several," replied the witness.

"Do you know who they were?"

"Yes, some of them."

Anderson brought up the name of Kaufman again.

"Did George Kaufman ever visit her?"

"I don't know."

Familiar With Name.

The witness testified she was familiar with the name of George Kaufman, but said she did not know him. Kaufman was not further identified.

Miss Richardson said that from last May until the present, when the child has been staying with her mother, Miss Astor gave parties "every other Sunday."

"Any liquor at the parties?" Anderson queried.

The witness said there was, but added that no one ever became intoxicated and the guests left by 11 p. m., sober.

"Was any man ever alone with Miss Astor when you were there?"

"Mr. Goodrich."

The purpose of Anderson's questioning was to show Miss Astor's fitness or unfitness to care for her child.

Party Aid on Maine Paper

aging editor of the Washington Post. Later he did campaign work for the late Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, in the 1932 Presidential nomination campaign.

Following the convention he joined the staff of the Democratic National Committee and later took the RFC post, becoming also a special assistant to Jesse H. Jones, head of the RFC. Several weeks ago he was transferred back to the publicity staff of the national committee.

Both he and Charles Michaelson, director of publicity for the national committee, disclaimed knowledge of what persons, if any, might have provided additional money for the paper.

Another indication of the Democrats' intense interest in the Maine result came yesterday in President Roosevelt's hastily arranged stopover in that State. He suddenly altered the schedule for his trip to Quebec, where he will confer with the Governor General and the Prime Minister of Canada, and went ashore from his yacht for an inspection of the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing project.

Only the day before, the President had told a crowd at his summer home at Campobello, N. B., that "we are going to have 'Quoddy," though Congress has refused to provide funds to continue the project, to the bitter disappointment of Maine residents. Mr. Roosevelt started the project with allotments of $7,000,000 of relief funds.

Representative J. W. Martin, chairman of the Eastern division of the G. O. P. National Committee, announced an imposing list of speakers who will be sent into the State before the balloting there.

The tentative list includes Col. Frank Knox, Vice Presidential nominee; John D. M. Hamilton, national chairman; Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan; Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, and Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas.

Efforts also are being made to have former President Hoover speak there. Gov. Harry W. Nice, of Maryland, has been added to the Republicans' list and there will be sent to Maine also, the Associated Press reported, three Kansas Representatives whose mission it will be to acquaint that New England State with their Governor, Alf M. Landon, the Republican Presidential nomineee. The Representatives are U. S. Guyer, Clifford R. Hope and William P. Lambertson.

"We are confident of a sweeping victory in Maine, but we do not intend to take anything for granted," Representative Martin said.

60 District Officials Hold Luncheon Meeting

Sixty District department heads yesterday held their second monthly luncheon meeting with Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, vice president, presiding in the absence of Elwood Street, director of public welfare.

Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, spoke on the necesity of having courteous employes to handle contacts with the public and of department heads being familiar with legislative needs of their divisions.

Lee Boulevard Project Is Sped By Wainwright

Commandant of Fort Myer Not to Oppose Bill Granting Land.

Early action by the State Highway Department on completion of the Lee boulevard to the Arlington Memorial Bridge appeared assured yesterday following a letter to Col. H. G. Shirley, State highway commissioner, from Col. Jonathan M. Wainwright, Fort Myer commandant.

In the letter Wainwright stated he would not oppose introduction by the State Highway Department of a bill at the next session of Congress providing for the Government to convey to the State that part of the road used by the boulevard in its approach to the bridge.

Adopting recommendations of County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan, the board yesterday awarded the contract for remodeling the couthouse to the Julius Kinlein Construction Co., of Baltimore. The bid was $15,800.

Work was started immediately by the contractor, who has just completed the addition to the building. The new job will require three months.

Acting upon recommendations of County Engineer C. L. Kinnier, the board authorized Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas to go ahead with condemnation proceedings to acquire rights of way along Wilson boulevard between North Tenth street and Glebe road.

Kinnier said some property owners asked 40 cents a foot and another 50, which he considered unreasonable. Two offered their land at 10 cents while another asked 12½, he added. He was instructed to proceed at once with a survey along Fairfax drive from Clarendon to Glebe road.

Richard Wirt, engineer in charge of the sewer department, submitted tentative figures showing the front-foot assessment for lateral lines at $1.62½ a foot. He said that if consideration be given to repair of road the cost would jump to $1.80 a foot.

He admitted that lateral lines could be laid for less money, but the figures given are in accordance with PWA construction. The board will consider the problem August 12.

Total expenditures for the month, amounting to $48,682.17, including a $19,108.95 pay roll, were approved.

Senator Donahey Returns to Fish

Following the example of aviators who resume flying as soon as possible after they have been involved in a crash, Senator Vic Donahey, Ohio Democrat, who was injured Wednesday when a bolt of lightning struck the launch on which he was fishing near Solomons Island, returned to angling yesterday.

"I'm all right," he assured his friends. "I was shaken and stunned, but it's over now."

Burns on the lawmaker's hands were so much improved yesterday that he was able to hold a rod and cast about in Chesapeake Bay waters.

Mrs. Donahey, who had been visiting in Cleveland, arrived at Solomons Island last night with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James Johnson.

Daughter's Charge Costs Father $10

A Capitol Heights, Md., man who threw hot coffee on his 15-year-old daughter "because she returned home and ate his bread," was fined $10 yesterday in the Capitol Heights Police Court for assault.

Ruth Carrick testified that her father, Purcey Carrick, the defendant, had driven her and her small brother from home. After days of wandering from place to place she "returned home for something to eat."

"I thought the bread I ate belonged to my mother," she said.

Busman Takes a Real Holiday

Chincoteague Holds Rodeo

—that he offered to ride one of them.

He told the judges he was Robert Cresse and that he drove a truck for an oil company.

"Whar do you want your body sent?" Cresse was asked.

"Don't worry about me," said the truck driver. Let me on that pony."

He climbed over the pen and let himself down on the pony's back. The pen was opened and the pony came out like a lightning streak, ten devils in his eye.

"Wheel!" yelled Truck Driver Cresse.

"He shifted gears on me," panted Cresse.

Billy Short, 20-year-old farmhand from around Dover, Del., was the next to try his luck. He landed in a mud puddle, and the dresses of the Chincoteague girls outside the ence were ruined as the puddle erupted.

"That wasn't a fair trial," cried Billy.

He mounted the pony again, and again he skidded on his nose.

The one successful rider was Aloysius Steiert, who works in a broom factory at Valley Forge, Pa. He rode his broncho like a duck riding a wave and got a great hand from the crowd and $10 from the judges.

Cresse and Short, however, thought Steiert was a sissy because he held onto a rop tied around the pony's belly. They had nothing but a handful of shaggy mane to keep them aboard.

The Chincoteague Islanders themselves displayed a marked aversion to riding, and for good reason. Not many of them know how to ride. Their skill is with boats.

It it hadn't been for a shipwreck more than 300 years ago, Chincoteague Island probably wouldn't have any ponies. The ship, so the legend goes, was a Spanish galleon, bound down the coast with a cargo of undersized horses for the King's settlers in the New World. When the ship was wrecked, according to the story, the ponies swam ashore and managed to survive and multiply.

Today's rodeo and general fiesta were the window-dressing for an important bit of pony-selling. Yesterday the animals, 300 of them, were rounded up in the marshlands, and today the three men who now own them auctioned off the likely colts.

A hundred were sold, the prices ranging from $35 to $50. This money was virtually clear profit, since the wild herd subsists entirely on marsh grass, winter and summer.

Some of the ponies were so young—two months and less—that they will have to be kept on a bottle for a while.

J. A. Wheeler bought six of the little fellows for a total of $210. He owns Huntmere Farms, which lies between Alexandria and Fairfax and adjoins Godfrey Gulch, the farm of red-haired Arthur Godfrey, the radio broadcaster.

"They'll be put out in clover," said Wheeler, "and I believe they'll like that better than marsh grass."

The feelings of the ponies on this point could not be determined, although they seemed pretty reluctant to leave their wild mothers.

Tomorrow the stallions, brood mares and colts that weren't sold will go back to the marshes and rugged individualism until next year's roundup and rodeo.

500 Anti-Communists Are Jailed by Mexico

Laredo, Tex., July 30 (U.P.).—Five hundred members of the Accion Civica Nacionalista, anti-Communist society, were herded into the military prison at Monterrey, Mexico, tonight, on charges growing out of last night's riot, in which three persons were killed and eight wounded, according to reports received here.

The riot occurred when Communists stormed the casino in an effort to break up a meeting of 1,500 members of the Accion Civica Nactionalista, according to advices from Monterrey.

Auto Tourney At McLean Set For Tomorrow

John C. Mackall, of Langley, Fairfax County, member of the House of Delegates, will deliver the charge to the knights who participate in the automobile tournament tomorrow afternoon at the McLean, Va., carnival.

This modern version of the old-time riding tournament will start at 3 o'clock, the riders using automobiles in place of horses. Four cash prizes will be awarded the winners, who will also have the privilege of naming the girl to be crowned Queen of Love and Beauty, and her maids, at the coronation ball in the evening.

State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax, will deliver the coronation address at 8:30 p. m.

Fairfax County Pomona Grange at its meeting in Sherwood Hall, adopted a resolution favoring the construction of a four-lane traffic bridge to replace the present Chain Bridge.

The secretary was instructed to write the State highway commission, requesting that the traffic hazard existing on the Little River Pike, at Difficult Run Bridge, west of Fairfax, be eliminated as soon as possible.

The program included an address by C. C. Carr, of Fairfax, on "America's Attitude Toward World Peace;" readings by Mrs. A. Harmon Roberts, of Indian Springs; Mrs. Margaret Cox, of Woodlawn, and A. R. Harrison, of Groveton.

8 U. S. Air Records Bettered by Italy

Eight international seaplane speed records formerly held by United States pilots and planes have been bettered by Italians, according to word received by the National Aeronautic Association from the Federation Aeronautique Internationale in France.

Three of the records were formerly held by Maj. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, commanding officer of the General Headquarters Air Force. The remaining five were held jointly by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Edwin Musick and Boris Sergievsky.

The records for which the Italians have set better marks are for 1,000 kilometers without load, with a 500 and 1,000 and 2,000 kilogram loads, all 194.6 miles per hour, and for 2,000 kilometers with similar loads, 190.9 miles per hour.

The present standing of record holding among nations is United States, 46; France, 37; Italy, 34; Germany, 8; Poland, 8, and Great Britain, 1.

Chief of TVA Indicates He Won't Resign Post

Knoxville, Tenn., July 30 (A.P.).—Chairman Arthur E. Morgan of the Tennessee Valley Authority, reviewing its program and policies, dropped a hint he has no intention of resigning.

He talked over the work of the organization before employes yesterday. It was his first speech to them since his return from a month's vacation at Yellow Springs, Ohio.

Morgan was reported unofficially to have threatened to resign when David E. Lilienthal, a fellow director, was reappointed by President Roosevelt over his protest.

Democrat Club Of Alexandria Plans a Cruise

Young Party Group to Meet in Gadsby's Tavern Prior to Outing.

The Young Democrats Club of Alexandria will sponsor an excursion Thursday on the steamer Potomac leaving Alexandria at 9:15 p. m. A meeting of the club will be held in Gadsby's Tavern at 7:30 p. m., after which the members will board the steamer for the trip down the Potomac.

The committee in charge of arrangements is composed of Mrs. Robert A. Bowman, Mrs. John Haley, Harry F. Kennedy, Westcott Hill, John Brookfield and Stanleigh Swan.

An executive committee meeting of the Young Democrats will be held monday at 7:30 p. m., at the home of Mrs. R. A. Bowman.

Joseph Farrell, 58, died Wednesday at his home, 235 East Windsor avenue. Mr. Farrell, a painter, recently came to Alexandria from New York. Besides his wife, Mrs. Emily Farrell, he is survived by two sons, Joseph and Robert Farrell.

The funeral will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. from the Cunningham Funeral Home, conducted by the Rev. L. J. Koster, pastor of St. Rita's Catholic Church. Burial will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery.

Funeral services for Miss Frances Elizabeth Moriarty, 17, killed when struck by lightning at her home on Duke street, extended, Wednesday afternoon, will be held today at 9:30 a. m. from St. Mary's Catholic Church, by the Very Rev. A. J. Rankin, pastor, and interment will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Besides her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Moriarty, she is survived by four brothers and one sister. She was a senior in the high school of St. Mary's Academy, and was to have graduated at the coming session, being prevented by illness from graduating last June.

Pennsylvania Aid Compromise Voted

Harrisburg, Pa., July 30 (A.P.).—The Pennsylvania Legislature tonight approved the transfer of $3,000,000 from special funds to revive emergency relief for the unemployed, shut off more than a week ago.

The resolution was rushed to Gov. Earle a short time after it was approved by the House and Senate without debate.

The resolution was introduced in the House a few hours after Democrats and Republicans agreed upon a program for $50,500,00, mostly for relief.

Approval of the transfer, providing for a loan of $2,000,000 from the State stores fund and $1,000,000 from the liquid fuels tax fund, was greeted with boos and jeers from a "jobless army" in the gallery.

Fishermen Warned Angling Is Illegal In Bass Sanctuary

Fish bred in Roaches Run, the bird and bass sanctuary recently established between Washington and Alexandria, aren't fair game for anglers, National Capital Park officials warned yesterday.

The warning followed the recent arrest of two Virginia fishermen, Roland Omohundro, 32, of Clarendon, and Jerry Kidwel, 45, of Ballston, who were seized while fishing in the forbidden waters. Each man forfeited $10 collateral after appearing before United States Commissioner John Barton Phillips in Alexandria.

Prior to the arrests, Paul Hodge, the sanctuary caretaker, had merely warned the fishermen caught angling for bass. When word spread that being driven off the place was the only penalty involved the numbers of fishermen multiplied almost as rapidly as the bass.

Pilots Face Inquiry In Crash on the Bay

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 30.—The pilots aboard two ships that crashed in the Chesapeake Bay, endangering the lives of more than 200 passengers, were summoned today to a hearing to answer charges of inattention to duties.

The hearing will be held Tuesday before Capt. Paul H. Tyler and David Young, steamboat inspectors here. The captains of the two vessels involved in the crash were not named in the charges.

The pilots summoned are:

Capt. Jesse Foster, who holds a Federal pilot's license and who was coastwise pilot in charge of the freighter Golden Harvest at the time of the collision off Seven Foot Knoll in the bay near here.

George Washington, chief mate of the excursion boat State of Virginia, who holds both master's and pilot's license. He was on the bridge of the vessel when the crash occurred.

Approximately 200 persons, including Gov. Harry W. Nice, were aboard the State of Virginia returning from a two-day trip on the bay. All the passengers were shaken up, but no one was injured.

France May Present John D., Jr., Old Chapel

New York, July 30 (A.P.).—Herbert E. Winlock, director of the Metropolitan Museum, disclosed tonight that a fifteenth century chapel near Vesoul, France, would be brought to this country as a gift to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., if an act before the French Senate and Chamber becomes law.

He said it was planned to dismantle the chapel, built by Charles the Bold, of Burgundy, and re-erect it, piece by piece, in the museum cloisters at Fort Tryon Park. The gift, Winlock stated, would be from the French government in appreciation of Rockefeller's philanthropic work there.

Prince Georges Crops Hit Hard By Hail Storm

Number of Farmers Face Bankruptcy Because of Entire Loss.

Bankruptcy stared into the faces of a number of lower Prince Georges County farmers yesterday as agricultural officials placed the loss from Wednesday night's hail storm "in the thousands of dollars."

County Agent P. E. Clark and W. B. Posey, University of Maryland Extension Service specialist, said the devastating hail that swept across the Potomac River had "destroyed the entire crops of 10 to 12 farmers."

They referred especially to tobacco. In some instances, corn, although beaten to the ground, will rise again, they said.

After a preliminary survey they described the damaged area as extending, in Prince Georges County, from Sharpersville and Piscataway north to the Southern Maryland pike, and as far east as T. B., Md.

"The reports of conditions, which have reached Upper Marlboro, are not exaggerated in the least," said Clark. "The farmers have suffered greatly."

It was believed that the storm first struck the Maryland shore in the vicinity of Marshall Hall, extending both southward to the interior of Charles County and northward into Prince Georges County.

Group of Colored Elks To Sift Alleged Fraud

Dr. Leo S. Holton yesterday was named chairman of a special committee to investigate irregularities in transactions of "various individuals and committees" during the 1935 convention of the Grand Lodge of Colored Elks here.

August 12 tentatively was set for the meeting of the committee by Dr. Charles B. Fisher, general chairman of the inquiry. Members of this group will come from every lodge and temple in the Washington jurisdiction, with the exception of Columbia Lodge, which did not act with the general committee.

Col. Knox Accuses Democrats of Hamstringing National and World Recovery

Limitation of Federal Power And Economic Reform Pledged

Preservation of Free Enterprise as Against Regimentation of Society Under Paternal Government Declared Real Issue.

Chicago, July 30.—The text of the address of Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, tonight accepting the Republican nomination for Vice President of the United States, follows:

By the Associated Press.

Senator Steiwer, fellow citizens:

You have heard the eloquent words of that stalwart statesman from our sister State of Oregon, Senator Steiwer. You have heard him convey to me the official notification of my nomination by the Republican Party for the high office of Vice President of the United States. You have heard his clear call to all citizens to join in a crusade for sound government in America. You have heard his friendly and flattering references to me.

It becomes my privilege and my duty to accept this call to service. I am deeply conscious of the personal honor that has been conferred on me by the Republican Party. I am deeply conscious also of the responsibility that rests on me to bear this honor worthily. But I am, above all, conscious of the opportunity for service. Even above and beyond my profound appreciation of the honor and the responsibility that have been given me is my appreciation of the opportunity to serve not only my party but my country.

It is customary in acknowledgments of this kind to avoid personal reference. Tonight, I am going to depart briefly from that custom. I am a working man. I have always worked. I began to work as a small boy in a small town in Michigan. Throughout my life, I have followed one guiding principle. That principle was to do as best I could the job that lay before me. That principle carried me into life and work in a fine New England town. It took me into difficult and responsible work in the great City of New York. It carried me into the service of my country in two wars. It brought me to my work and my home in the great City of Chicago, the metropolis of a great State in a great Middle West empire.

And I am moved tonight by a realization that in this crusade for the restoration of sound Government in our land there is before me the greatest opportunity for service that has ever come to me. Long years ago, I learned as a buck private the lessons of duty and of loyalty, in the years that have passed I have learned the equally important lesson that the greatest achievement of any man is service to his fellow citizens.

In this spirit of service I accept the call of my party. I pledge my loyalty to the principles of the Republican Party. I pledge my loyalty to the policies laid down at the Cleveland convention. I pledge myself to the principles of sound and honest government. I pledge my personal loyalty to that great governor of a prairie State, the next President of the United States, the Honorable Alf Landon.

It is no ordinary campaign that confronts us. It is no ordinary political choice that the country must make next November. In this Presidential campaign, as in every other, it is for the Nation to decide whether the Administration in office has performed its duty. There is always the question whether the Administration in office has met its responsibilities honestly and fairly and wisely. There is always the question whether it has fulfilled the stewardship entrusted to it and earned thereby a renewal of its direction of Government for four more years. In every election the people must decide whether they shall say: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Needs of Nation 3 Years Ago Offered Administration Great Opportunity.

In this first and ordinary issue the present Administration is found wanting. It has failed to meet its responsibility for the orderly, economical and impartial administration of the affairs of the Nation. More than three years ago the present Administration took command of the American Government. No administration in the history of the Nation has had so glorious an opportunity. The country had already begun to emerge from the bottom pit of a grievous world depression, caused by a calamitous World War. A sore and wounded Nation needed pathetically a wise and far-seeing government. The millions of stagnant enterprises needed only the encouragement of sensible government policies to take on renewed life.

A stricken agriculture needed only the encouragement of sound agricultural policies and wise legislative assistance. The timid beginnings of renewed investment needed only the encouragement of sound laws of banking and credit. The spirit of American enterprise, discouraged by vanished markets and reduced consumption, needed only the encouragement of economy and moderation and helpfulness in government. No administration in our history since Lincoln's time has had so grand an opportunity to lend aid to a distressed people.

The present Administration in the winter of 1933 had just one immediate responsibility to meet. That responsibility was to promote the little flame of recovery that had begun to burn in the summer of 1932, before the blessings of a New Deal were even imagined. The present Administration had just one job to perform. That job was to carry out a program that would enable American enterprise to put 12,000,000 unemployed back to work, 12,000,000 men and women workers who were the unhappy and helpless victims of a world depression for which this Nation was not responsible. The present Administration had just one moral obligation to keep. That obligation was to fulfill the solemn promises of economy and moderation with which it lured the people in the campaign of 1932.

How did it meet that responsibility? How did it do that job? How did it keep that moral obligation? From the day that it took office it embarked on a series of hysterical experiments on the economic life of a burdened people. At a time when universal cooperation was a necessity it initiated a campaign of abuse and vilification of business men. At a time when the credit of the country should have been strengthened it inaugurated a policy of credit adulteration and currency experiment that demoralized foreign trade and frightened domestic finance.

It set up a system of regimentation of industry that reduced production and prevented re-employment. By coercion of Congress it forced the passage of reform measures so recklessly drawn that they hamstrung the revival of enterprise and paralyzed the renewal of investment. It installed a regimentation of agriculture that destroyed food and reduced foreign markets and increased the cost of living and mutliplied the expense of relief.

At a time when private industry was struggling desperately for a new start it set up governmental enterprise to compete with private business. At a time when the burden of taxation was already hard to bear it embarked on a policy of squandering public funds and increasing the weight of taxes. At a time when united effort and mutual good-will would have completed recovery it promoted sectional hatred and class strife.

Public Spending Started at Time Business Showed Sign of Confidence.

At a time when returning business confidence was ending depression it began a campaign to terrorize business and subjugate the banks. At a time when confidence in the character of government was vital, it established a spoils system. At a time when the economic system was worn and emaciated it performed major surgical operations upon the industrial body to see what was inside. It adopted an economic philosophy of scarcity and forced it upon a hungry and distressed people.

The present Administration ignored its responsibility, failed in its job, defaulted in its obligation. I do not need to tell you the results. The inevitable recovery could not be permanently blocked by governmental error. It is still on its way. But it was retarded and discouraged. And we slowly emerge from its thralls with the menaces of governmental insolvency and nondescript currency and business disturbance shadowing the future. You see the results in the fourth year of mounting deficits, in the chaotic condition of our currency, in the bloated reserves of our banks, in the swollen expenditures for relief.

Above all, you see the results in the millions still unemployed. I charge the present Administration with delaying recovery, in the United States and in the world. I charge the present Administration with responsibility for the 10,000,000 still unemployed. It wold not be truthful to say that all the measures of the present Administration have been failures. In the mad whirl of economic experiments there have been a few sound and desirable measures of regulation. That must be freely conceded. But in the major measures of recovery and in the task of administration it has failed completely. It has not kept faith with the Nation. It has not fulfilled the duties of its stewardship. On this one issue, that it has not conducted the affairs of Government efficiently and economically, it should be condemned and rejected by the people.

This endless succession of interferences and experiments was inaugurated under the deceptive slogan of a New Deal. This policy of government by guess, officially explained by President Roosevelt as founded on a philosophy of try-anything-once, was initiated under the title of economic planning. No one of its proponents has even been able to define the New Deal or to explain what it is aimed at or where it is going. No one of them has been able to make clear what the economic plan is. It began with a proposal for a belt of trees in a territory that nature had decided should not have trees. It is ending with the use of public funds to conduct classes in tap-dancing. No one can explain the New Deal, or economic planning, but every one knows what came from it. The major measures were the NRA, the AAA, the PWA, the CWA, the WPA and devaluation of the dollar.

Such measures are not new. They were old in history before America was discovered. They failed in Babylon and Rome and England centuries ago. Not one of these New Deal measures is mentioned in the 1936 platform of the Democratic Party. There is no reference to the fate of these strange experiments. There is no reference in all that platform to the New Deal or to economic planning. But in this omission they are entirely consistent. There was no mention of them in the 1932 platform, either. They are a strange interlude between the solemn promises of the 1932 platform and the vague generalizations of the 1936 platform.

It is constantly asserted that the Republican Party has always stood for a strong Federal Government. The assertion is correct. It still stands for a vigorous Federal authority. But it advocates this authority within the limits set by the Constitution. It has always exercised that authority by legislation constitutionally passed and constitutionally executed. It always will. It has always exerted that authority without passing the boundaries of States' rights and local self-government.

The Republican Party recognizes that changing social and economic conditions call for increased Federal activities. But it always insists that such new activities shall be legalized by proper constitutional amendment. It always will. It approves the horse-and buggy method of changing the Constitution, and it disapprovcs a philosophy that laughs at the horse-and-buggy method and wants to use only the buggy whip. It condemns the abuse of Federal power to invade local rights. It does not believe in putting a New Jersey pants-presser in jail for charging less than the amount dictated by a board in Washington. It disapproves a government of men instead of a government of law. It prefers a government guided by constitutions to a government guided only by caprice.

The Republican platform of 1936 lays down in simple language the program of Federal regulation and legislation to which it commits itself on many issues. Where the specific program is not definitely outlined the details will be presented in the coming campaign. On certain matters Gov. Landon made the issues clear in his telegram to the Cleveland convention. In his acceptance speech one week ago he presented specific policies in reference to other important issues. Whatever concrete measures the Republicon Party has in mind will be presented to the voters before election, not after. And whatever measures the Republican Administration may urge upon Congress, not one will flout the Constitution of the United States. Not one will violate the obligation of contracts. Not one will break a promise.

I have already said that this is no ordinary campaign. On the mere issue of efficiency in administration the present government stands convicted of failure. But there is a larger issue, an issue that goes to the heart of American life. It is the issue of the kind of economic system the American people will live by. For more than three years the economic life of the country has been at the mercy of a crew of amateur experimenters, hacking at the vitals of American industry, agriculture, commerce and finance. Driven by a frantic impulse to shape our economic structure to their fantastic designs, they have usurped the powers of Congress, insulted the authority of the courts, invaded the powers of the States, and undermined the institutions of local self-government.

As one experiment after another has ended in ignominious failure or repudiation by the courts, new experiments have been attempted, from laws to put producers of potatoes in jail, to proposals to cut Florida in two. Driven to desperation by failure, the present Administration undertook to gamble with fate. Realizing that recovery was inevitable, in time, it undertook to overcome the depressing effects of its experiments by an artificial prosperity to be created by the squandering of public funds. It is now a race between the exhaustion of Federal credit and the coming of natural recovery. It is a race between inflation and the revival of normal business activity. The race is not yet decided.

The fundamental issue is now clear. No one can define the New Deal or even describe it. But we know what it means. It means Federal control over local business, over local bank credit, over local wages, over local conditions of work. It leads to Federal regimentation of the labor, the business and the home of every American citizen. It leads to price-fixing and production control by Federal authority. It leads inevitably to the extinction of the small business man, to the end of free enterprise in America.

There is no half-way house in which American enterprises can take shelter. The coercive control of bank credit leads unavoidably to control of investment and that leads to the end of competitive industry and free enterprise. The country must choose between the regimentation of the economic life of 130,000,000 people by politically appointed Federal bureaucrats and the continuance of the American system of free enterprise under a government of constitutional powers.

Nation Does Not Want a Dictator, Even a Good One, Al Smith Quoted.

It is not a question whether Federal regimentation of the economic life of a great nation can be successful or not. It is the verdict of history, from Diocletian in Rome to Mr. Roosevelt in Washington, that no one man can successfully guide the course of industry for a great nation. All the major New Deal experiments have ended in failure and economic loss. There are known and true principles of economic life. There are for that matter, competent economics, if you will look for them outside of Washington.

There are limits to the ability of government to regiment the economic life of a people. When it blindly passes these limits, it does not encourage industrial production; it destroys it. Such interference always encounters a drought or some other force beyond the conrtol even of a New Dealer. There are limits beyond which Federal regimentation should not go, even if it could be efficient. When it passes these limits it destroys personal initiative and individual liberty. The American people do not want Federal regimentation of their economic activities even if it could be efficient and fair. As Al Smith has expressed it, the American people do not want a dictator, not even if they could get a good one.

Here we have the issue that must be decided next November. It is whether the American people shall have an orderly and economical Government recognizing the limitations of Federal power or a Government determined to reorganize the American economic system by experiment. We know what the decision will be. The people want recovery, not rhetoric. They want economy, not waste. They want work, not relief. They want co-operation among the partners in production, not industrial strife. They want order in economic life, not an occasional breathing spell. They want dignity in government, not a merry-go-round.

They do not believe that all bankers are scoundrels, that all employers are exploiters, that all business men are motivated by greed, that all working people are victims of oppression. They do not believe that the American system was a failure until the New Deal came along to save it from its sins. They do not believe that American industry is a jungle of cut-throat competition dominated by intrenched greed. The people know that with the election of a new Administration next November the dammed-up forces of recovery will burst forth in a magnificent prosperity.

The American people know that in man's long and troubled journey through the ages he has faced flood and famine, pestilence and drought, conquest and slavery, tyranny and injustice, poverty and depression. They know that he has overcome these savage enemies through his unrelenting determination to work out his own economic salvation. Poverty and insecurity are not yet exterminated in our land. Economic hardship and economic injustice are not yet eliminated. But in the United States, in the last hundred years, the American people have come nearer to these goals than any other people anywhere in history.

Brave pioneering and hard work and patient saving have made this the richest and fairest civilization in history. It has not been made by sleight-of-hand tricks. With the American system preserved, we shall in due time have a free people, living in plenty and security, without exploitation or destitution. The American people are not going to surrender this prospect to the regimentation of visionaries and amateur economic planners. They are not going to exchange our economic system for the rainbow millennium of political magicians.

The President has recently told the American people that they have a rendezvous with destiny. As I understand the term, a rendezvous is a date. What is this rendezvous? Under present conditions, the most likely rendezvous is with a receiver for the Treasury. After the acceptance by the people of the promises of the 1932 platform, what unexpected rendezvous did the people have? They had a rendezvous with the NRA. They had a rendezvous with Farleyism. They had a rendezvous with the tax collectors. The American people want no rendezvous with a destiny plotted on blue prints in a Washington office. When they have a date with destiny they want to know what the lady looks like. They want to have a word to say about it.

The issue before the country is the preservation of free enterprise. On this issue the Republican Party appeals to the whole people. It appeals to the millions of sincere Democrats who have been outraged by the appearance of un-American practices in the garb of ancient democratic principles. It appeals to the millions of thrifty and hard-working people whose patiently accumulated savings in life insurance and savings accounts are jeopardized by the reckless spending of the present Administration. It appeals to the millions of business men who have for years faced the adversities of depression and are now facing the regimenter and the tax-gatherer. It appeals to the real forgotten men and women of the Nation, the millions of workers in agriculture and personal service and small enterprise who have been ignored in all the pretense of social legislation of the New Deal. It appeals to the women of America, who have borne the hardest blows of depression and unemployment and now face the problems of household management under a rising cost of living in an economy of scarcity.

The Republican Party does not promise to solve all these problems that you face. It has no patent nostrums to cure every economic ill. There is no royal road to the solution of all our economic problems. But the Republican Party does make certain promises. It does promise a fair and honest Government. It does promise that this Government will be as economical and efficient as it can be made. It does promise to make every effort to install sensible and practical measuses to help in the solution of the problems of trade and industry and agriculture, the problems of poverty and insecurity. Above all, it promises you that in its efforts to aid in these problems it will not prevent you from trying to work out your individual and personal problems for yourselves, with your own ambitions, your own enterprise and your own energies.

Through the 2,000 years of Christian civilization the price of progress has been sacrifice. Three hundreds years ago our forefathers could have purchased safety, but at the price of liberty. They could have remained safe in England and left the New World to be conquered by others. The men who signed the Declaration of Independence could have lived safely as colonists in the British Empire, but not as free men. Seventy years ago our fathers could have avoided civil war at the price of a disrupted union. They all preferred sacrifice to safety.

Again we reach a point where the blazes along the trail run out. Two ways lie ahead. One lies along the apparently easy valleys of a regimented society, maintained by a paternalistic government which falsely promises to provide its subjects with a security that men were wont to purchase in the past by their own efforts. The other lies along the rugged heights of self-support, self-government and self-respect.

Which will we choose? We know the path our fathers chose. More often than not the right way of life is not the easy way. Because we have always taken the self-reliant way, the self-respecting way, American character has emerged as our greatest national asset. Take from us every vestige of 300 years of progress, leave only the raw materials that God placed here, give us the American character, and we would swiftly reconstruct here a civilization as great as that we have today. America is too young, too vigorous, to be deceived by false promises on an easy way.

And so I preach to you the doctrin, not of the soft and spineless kept citizen of a regimented state, but of the self-respecting and self-reliant men who made America. Which way shall we go? The answer is in your hands. I know what it will be. Next November, you will choose the American way.

Pledges Loyalty.

"The answer is in your hands. I know what it will be. Next November you will choose the American way."

That course he identified with the program offered by his party.

"America is too young, too vigorous, to be deceived by the false promises of an easy way," he added.

After pledging his loyalty to the principles of the Republican Party and the policies laid down by the Cleveland convention, which nominated him as ballot colleague for its Kansas chief, Col. Knox further promised his personal allegiance to "that great Governor of a Prairie State, the next President of the United States, the Honorable Alf Landon."

"It is no ordinary campaign which confronts us," he continued.

"It is no ordinary political choice that the people of the country must make next November.

"In every election the people must decide whether they shall say: 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant.'

"It has failed to meet its responsibility for the orderly, economical and sound administration of the affairs of the Nation.

"From the day it took office it embarked on a series of hysterical experiments on the economic life of a burdened people."

The speaker asserted that at a time when universal co-operation was needed the present Administration "initiated a campaign of abuse and villification of business men" and went on to say:

"At a time when the credit of our country should have been strengthened it inaugurated a policy of credit adulteration and currency experiment that demoralized foreign trade and frightened domestic finance.

"It set up a system of regimentation in industry that reduced production and prevented re-employment.

"By coercion of Congress it forced the passage of reform measures so recklessly drawn that they hamstrung the revival of enterprise and paralyzed the renewal of investment.

"It installed a regimentation of agriculture that destroyed food and reduced foreign markets and increased the cost of living and multiplied the expense of relief."

As a result of New Deal policies, the speaker said, "the inevitable recovery," which could not be blocked even by Government error was none the less "retarded and discouraged."

A Lick And A Promise.

WPA officials are becoming quite serious in their efforts to divorce the relief organization from politics. Following the dismissal of seven WPA employes in Oklahoma for partisan activities, a foreman has been ousted in New York for similar reasons and two politicians directing relief work in Connecticut have been forced to resign. In time it may actually become somewhat unsafe for any relief worker to play politics shortly before an election.

In the New York case, however, the attitude of one political leader, Dr. Maxwell Ross, contributes to skepticism. His letter requesting a higher position for the WPA plumber foreman, whom he had named as chairman of the "Win With Roosevelt" movement, frankly assumed that it is a function of the relief organization to advance the Democratic cause. It requested a better position for the foreman "so that greater dignity may be attached to his name, in view of the position assigned to him in the coming campaign." Logic calls for ousting the district leader who is trying to debauch work relief, as summarily as Administrator Ridder dismissed the plumber foreman.

Also of importance are the resignations of State Senators Matthew A. Daly and Julius Stremlau, respectively WPA administrator and employment director for Connecticut. In forcing these resignations Aubrey Williams, acting WPA administrator, is putting into operation a rule against elected officials holding key positions in the work relief set-up. If that policy is rigorously applied, it could be an important influence toward the divorce of the relief machinery from politics.

Mr. Williams' actions lead to the hope that still more effective measures to purge the WPA of partisanship will be taken. Two additional steps are obviously desirable: Party officials and active campaigners should be as carefully weeded out as elected officials, and the merit system, thoroughly divorced from politics, should then be introduced as rapidly as practical. If the WPA is ready to accept these far-reaching reforms it can do something to eliminate the issue of political taint in the administration of relief from the Presidential campaign. But a simpler method would be to follow the course employed by Hercules in cleansing the Augean stables.

The Ponies Of Chincoteague.

Foreign visitors to the United States have not infrequently complained that while the physical American setting is one of unparalleled diversity, American life suffers from a deplorable sameness. In particular, it has been contended, local customs, which should be individual and distinctive, tend from one end of the Nation to the other to follow a monotonous pattern.

This charge was always exaggerated and it is certainly less true now than it once was. Consciously or unconsciously, communities in this country have begun to develop and capitalize their traditions, revive obsolescent customs or create new ones, many of which have begun to take root and to give color and charm to local life.

One need only recall the Mardi Gras festival in New Orleans, the Mummers' parade in Philadelphia, the apple blossom fetes of Virginia and western New York, the tourneys of Southern Maryland and the rose day parade in Los Angeles, to realize that in one way or another these are similar in spirit to the folk festivals of older civilizations. And where, as often is the case, these activities arise directly out of the life of the people and have a direct economic motivation, this circumstance is not to be deplored. It only means that they are more likely to take root.

This is the case with the annual round-up of the wild ponies of Chincoteague, which during the past 13 years has become a community enterprise attracting an ever larger number of visitors to that Virginia community of fisher folk. There is nothing synthetic or staged about this event. It has its roots deep in the past, going back, local tradition has it, to the distant time when a boatload of Spanish horses was shipwrecked on the islands of Chincoteague and Assateague.

By the time of the Revolution the corralling of the ponies had become a source of local income and from that time to this the practice has continued. It is only natural that the fiesta spirit should have developed in connection with the event. Those who have seen it can never forget the spectacle of the hitherto untamed steeds forced out of Assateague, where they had lived in a state of untrammeled freedom, into the shallow waters divjding that island from Chincoteague.

Nor does the color and drama of the event lose anything in the contemplation of the fact that it binds the present inhabitants of the islands with their forefathers and recalls the great days when Spain was the mistress of the seas and the conquistadores had made themselves masters over a large part of the Western Hemisphere.

Colonel Knox Accepts.

A majority of political speeches would be twice as good if they were half as long. The one delivered by Col. Frank Knox, in accepting the Republican Vice Presidential nomination at Chicago last night, helps to swell that majority.

There was a lot of good sound stuff in the colonel's lengthy denunciation of the New Deal, but it followed an unfortunately smug and self-satisfied start. A candidate for high office is not impressive when he emphasizes the "spirit of service" in which he accepts the "call" of his party. Those who serve best are generally those who say least about it, particularly in advance of any outstanding contribution to the national welfare.

Similarly unconvincing to objective observers are rhetorical denunciations which get across for the moment with the aid of a brass band, but which do not stand up so well in cold print the morning after. In such a category falls the Knox assertion that the Administration has forced the passage of reform measures "by coercion of Congress."

It may be that the colonel wished to put at ease his chairman, "that stalwart statesman from our sister State of Oregon, Senator Steiwer." As the voting record shows, Mr. Steiwer submitted very readily to the alleged "coercion" of the Administration in the early stages of the New Deal. But it would be more fair, and therefore more effective, to condemn the pusillanimity of spineless legislators when discussing the failure to give careful advance analysis to the obvious defects of various Administration measures.

After Col. Knox had reached the comfortable conclusion that recovery is "inevitable," regardless of the retardations caused by governmental errors, he made many thought-provoking observations. His attack on "government by guess" was to the point and effective, not the less so because this Vice Presidential nominee would be hard put to it to name the parallels of New Deal policies which he asserts were tried in England "centuries ago." Russia today would be a more striking analogy.

To the point also was the assertion that "there is no half-way house" between laissez faire and a regimented society. Literally, of course, this is not true. Except in a static society the functions of government are always at a half-way house between what was considered proper and what will be considered natural. Indeed, the colonel pointed this out himself in saying that "the Republican Party recognizes that changing social and economic conditions call for increased Federal activities."

What he obviously meant, in this connection, was that far-reaching measures, insidiously sponsored as thoroughly justified by admitted evils, may readily have wholly disproportionate effects upon the structure of American government and the future of American liberties. In ringing the changes on this insufficiently realized fact, Col. Knox was at his best.

British Credit For Russia.

The agreement just signed by the British Board of Trade and the Soviet trade delegation at London, under which the British Treasury has opened a credit of £10,000,000 to Russia, has both economic and political implications of considerable importance.

For the past few years British industry has been enjoying a boom of some magnitude, largely the result of the shift from relative free trade to drastic protectionism which has permitted domestic producers greatly to expand their home market. But this boom has very definite limits and has lately begun to show signs of subsiding.

Such agreements as that now made with Russia may help take up the slack, since they provide the basis for an expansion of British foreign trade. It is interesting to note in this connection that while the treasury's guarantee is for 10 years, Russia must place its orders for the full amount of the credit during the next 12 months. With Germany, formerly the Soviet government's principal source of foreign credit and of manufactured goods, now regarded by the Moscow regime with suspicion, Great Britain is placed in a favorable position to capture a large part of the expanding Russian market.

But no less important than the potential economic consequences of the Anglo-Russian credit deal are its political implications. Time was when the Moscow government was regarded at London as the principal enemy of the British Empire. Under the exigencies of the present international situation that view has apparently been abandoned. Great Britain is now definitely disposed to co-operate with Russia. This shift was reflected in Britain's friendly attitude toward the Franco-Russian alliance and more recently in the British about-face at the Montreux parley. There, with Britain's consent, the Russian point of view regarding the right of egress of Russian warships from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean was adopted.

The credit deal is a further indication of the same friendly spirit now obtaining between London and Moscow. Its significance will not be lost to sight in Berlin.

Velocity Dollars.

Tomorrow the Canadian Province of Alberta will begin to issue "prosperity certificates," in denominations of $1 and $5, as payment to men engaged on public works.

These certificates will be redeemable in cash at the end of two years. Meantime, holders will be required to affix a penny stamp each week to the certificates, and at the end of two years the government expects to have acquired a redemption fund amounting to $1.04 for each dollar issued. The scheme is not new and would not attract particular attention if it were not for the fact that the province is bankrupt and is committed by its present premier, to a hare-brained scheme of social credit well calculated to destroy its credit, even if it had not broken its contract with bondholders by cutting interest rates in half.

During the worst days of the depression many kinds of scrip circulated in this country as substitutes for money, some of it being issued by hard-pressed municipalities and counties. Chicago had a long and inglorious experiment with scrip issues used to pay long-suffering city employes, who had to dispose of it at heavy discounts. In some places scrip issues were fairly well received and tided over emergencies in sections hard hit by bank failures. There were even a few experiments with stamped currency of the Alberta type.

However, the government of that province is apparently trying to deceive its people into thinking that a wonder-working device has been invented for financing the government and beneficially increasing the rate of circulation of money. Since a penny stamp must be affixed each week to the new certificates, it is assumed that holders of the "velocity dollars" will spend them quickly in order to avoid the stamp payment.

The chief trouble with the plan is that the confidence essential to ready acceptance of this fiat money is lacking. Chambers of commerce in Edmonton and Calgary, and wholesalers' and retailers' associations, are said to have advised their members to refuse the scrip. It seems highly probable, therefore, that it will circulate at a heavy discount, and as a result will scarcely add to the popularity of the government with the unfortunate relief workers forced to accept it.

The scheme, of course, has not the remotest connection with social credit, but is merely a tricky device for enabling the government to spend money in advance of tax receipts. The stamps affixed to the dollar certificates represent taxes collected from the people for a redemption fund. If Alberta's credit were reasonably good, the plan might have a fair chance of success. However, in that case, there would be no valid reason for resorting to such roundabout methods of covering outlays.

As William Marchington, writing from Ottawa, explained on the page opposite on Tuesday, this cumbrous method of printing money is simply an alternative to borrowing from a bank. The scrip will probably fall at once to a discount, and the more rapid the depreciation, the greater will be the incentive to get rid of it. On that account the "prosperity certificates" may well become "velocity dollars."

Inconsistent Law Enforcement.

In February, two 18-year-old boys were brought before the District Police Court, charged with having pulled 29 false fire alarms. After some delay, during which a Senator's influence was allegedly brought to bear in the boys' behalf, they agreed to plead guilty on 7 of 29 counts. The court found them guilty, took their personal bonds in six instances and suspended $40 fines in the seventh. In addition, they were put on probation for a year with instructions to report weekly to an officer of the court; their automobile driving licenses were also suspended indefinitely because they "used a motor car for illegal purposes."

On Wednesday of this week, two other boys of approximately the same age were haled into Police Court, charged with having pulled 11 false alarms. They were found guilty on every count and were each sentenced to serve 330 days in jail.

Allowing for all differences in character and previous record, the discrepancy in the two sets of sentences seems indefensible. It is everywhere agreed that the ringing of false alarms is an intolerable offense and one on which the law must clamp down firmly. None will deny, also, that the court should strive in its juvenile cases for corrective rather than vindictive sentences, the more so when dealing with first offenders. But there should be some measure of consistency in judgments on the same crime.

Without this, the unfortunate impression is spread that justice in Washington is administered by favor rather than by logic.

"Black" Lightning.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your organization in general and one of your photographers in particular are to be congratulated upon the picture of lightning striking the Washington Monument, which picture appeared in both the Bulletin and the Evening Public Ledger of this city.

However, as a former Washingtonian still in daily contact with the Capital City, permit me to give you the following information as to the "black lightning," which the caption to the photograph reproduction alleges to be "an unsolved mystery." I am very interested in photography of all kinds and especially in 13 mm. motion picture photography, both black-and-white and color, and frequently upon my positive prints I have noticed "lightning" and fern-like, hairy lines, which it has been proved result from "static" discharges against or in the neighborhood of the film, either when being rapidly loaded or unloaded or, in the case of motion picture film, when the film is passing through the camera during the process of exposure.

In an article by Kenneth Carson entitled "Static" and published in Trade Bulletin of June, 1931, of Defender Photo Supply Co., Inc., Rochester, N. Y., he states:

"Static appears on undeveloped film negatives variously, in the form of markings resembling trees, lightning, daisies, stars, etc. It is hard for the photographer to realize that these blemishes could result from any fault in his handling of the material, but since the danger of static trouble is thoroughly understood and guarded against in the film manufacturing plant, the appearance of these manifestations can almost invariably be attributed to manipulation. . . . Motion picture photographers are familiar with static and guard against its appearance. News reel men in particular encounter it.

"Now let us consider loading film in the holders and handling the slides . . . Drawing the slide quickly, loading and replacing the slide briskly—and that's the way it's done more often than not—creates a certain amount of static by friction. As the slide makes contact with the lower part of the holder, electricity discharges. It will, at times, register on the film. Hard rubber slides are more likely to generate static by friction than the old paper composition slides. The passing of the slide over the felt at the top of the holder does the trick. The cause is more likely to occur in the camera room than in the dark room. Working hurriedly during a sitting, one is likely to be a bit hasty in pulling slides and in replacing them. And in proportion to the haste—or roughness—the possibility of static-marked negatives increases. . . ."

The illustrations in Mr. Carson's article show the black line effect upon negatives, whereas in the positive print of the Washington Monument and in my motion picture positives the effect is manifested as black lines also. Possibly someone can explain this difference, as it is well known that black lines upon a negative will invariably result in white lines upon the positive. It may be due to the difference in emulsions, as it is known that safety base film is more subject to static manifestations than is nitrate film, and photographers changing from the latter to the former are likely at first to run into static trouble.

Anglo-Saxons And America's Future.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Conceding Mr. Lanier's contention in his letter to The Post of July 27, that these United States were settled primarily by people of Anglo-Saxon origin, he will not deny that in building this great country to what it is today, peoples of different origin had a hand in its making.

He bemoans the probability that our Government will be so changed that no one vestige of Anglo-Saxon origin will remain. Should this ever come to pass, it will but further attest the great wisdom of our fathers. This country was to be not a country of classes but a place for people who were willing to assume obligations of a free man, help in the upbuilding of America, establish a home, raise a family, obey the laws of the land and fuse into the American citizenship. Our fathers had no preferences; the Constitution makes no mention of such discriminations as Anglo-Saxons, or others.

One wonders who is the greater enemy of America, whether it is the deluded Communist, or a brand of patriots who say that Washington, Franklin, Jefferson and Cleveland and Lincoln were wrong and that they are right. Fortunately, we have here in Washington good Americanization schools. Considering the various forces threatening our institutions, I think an emergency law would be justifiable, placing all so-called patriots who blaspheme the founders of our republic, in a class of juveniles, making their attendance to these Americanization schools compulsory. I. T.
Washington, July 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter from Alexander Sidney Lanier in your issue of July 29 touches a vital matter. The battle of Quebec, whether justified or not, settled the dispute as to French or English dominance of what is now the United States. What that battle did not do, Thomas Jefferson did by the Louisiana Purchase. And whether right or wrong, the Indian was pushed out by Anglo-Saxon civilization. Our forefathers were acting on Old Testament methods, interpreting the Bible literally, when a backward or even unlettered race was practically destroyed to give place to "God's chosen people." For the Anglo-Saxon thought thus of himself.

But the Anglo-Saxon did one thing which must forever be put to his credit: he declared for religious liberty. Our people are continually failing to distinguish between "toleration" and "religious liberty." This country does not owe any man who comes to it (to make it his home) a toleration which that same man does not permit in the land from which he came. Religious liberty means something much more than toleration. It is a principle which we as a people cannot permit to be submerged by an influx of foreign-borns who would use our toleration to subvert our basic beliefs and the very warp and woof of our Government. Our Constitution and the spirit of our Nation are built on Anglo-Saxon principles. And Anglo-Saxon people, represented best now by the English people, are the most tolerant of all people on the globe. For that reason the English are the most successful colonizers of the great nations of earth.

J. O. KNOTT.
Washington, July 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondent in the letter column of July 29, Mr. Alexander Sidney Lanier, should stop reading ghost stories. He should, instead, read a bit of history, and perhaps travel a bit.

The future he predicts (as a result of pure Anglo-Saxon stock having become mixed with other strains) is as the result of a bad dream.

Mr. Lanier, have you ever lived in the South, where the Anglo-Saxon peoples are still supreme? Is the politics down there to your liking?

Do you approve of Huey Long's kind of politics, or Blanton's? Are you thinking of Lemke's? Is it the fact that Landon is on a losing ticket that bothers you?

Washington, July 29.

The Queen Mary's Speed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of July 28 to the contrary notwithstanding, the Queen Mary did not beat the Normandie's time by three hours and five minutes. This is so well understood by the captain of the Queen Mary that he is quoted as stating that he does not claim the record for his ship.

Why you should claim it for him appears to me to be an excess of zeal.

If a man left Baltimore for New York at the same time as another man left Washington for the same destination, there would certainly be no ground for congratulating the first man because he reached New York ahead of the other man. If it was shown that the Washington man actually covered more miles per hour than the Baltimore man, the record for the trip would belong to the Washington man.

In other words, had the Normandie covered the same distance as the Queen Mary when she established her record, the French ship would have crossed the shorter distance in less time than it took the Queen Mary, since she is a faster boat.

It will be time enough to congratulate the British when and if the Queen Mary clearly breaks the record. Meanwhile, the wonder is that, with a power plant 50,000 horsepower greater than that of the Normandie, she did not break the record on her nrst trip as well as on each of the succeeding trips.

LOUISE TAYLOR.
Washington, July 29.

An Inadvertent Slip.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There appears in The Post of July 28 an article by Ralph Heinzen, chief of the United Press Paris Bureau, entitled "Europe in Two Camps." The subtitle reads: "Holy Alliance Revived, etc." In the text, Mr. Heinzen writes: "As a result of the Austro-German entente, the Holy Alliance has been revived. And just as before 1914, etc."

Obviously the author means not "Holy Alliance," but "Triple Alliance," as the former became extinct through inapplication after 1849, and the latter was operative in 1914 and composed of Germany, Italy and Austria-Hungary.

If this mistake might be credited to a slip on the part of Mr. Heinzen (although I doubt it), the repetition of the "slip" in the subtitle can be credited only to carelessness or even ignorance on the part of the editorial staff.

LEONID I. STRAKHOVSKY,
Professor of Modern European History, Georgetown University.
Washington, July 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was amazed to see a glaring inaccuracy in an article of The Post of July 28 entitled "Europe in Two Camps, Holy Alliance Revived." The error appears in this headline and in the statement: "As a result of the Austro-German entente the Holy Alliance has been revived." No doubt the writer intended to refer to the prewar alignment of the Triple Alliance and Triple Entente. The reference to the Holy Alliance is inappropriate.

Two alliances were founded in Europe after the fall of Napoleon. One of these, the Quadruple Alliance, made up of England, Austria, Prussia and Russia had as its purpose the maintenance of the status quo according to the Treaty of Vienna. The other, the Holy Alliance, was the brain child of the idealistic czar, Alexander, and its avowed purpose was to insure that its members deal with one another and with their respective subjects according to the principles of Christianity. Actually, it degenerated very quickly into an agency of reaction and repression, Russia even sending troops into Austrian territory to help stamp out revolts of the liberals. The members were at first Russia, Prussia and Austria and later every other state in Europe with the exception of England and the Papal States.

It seems to me unfortunate that any writer should attempt to comment on present-day European alliances with so poor an understanding of nineteenth century diplomacy.

The Post Impressionist

Post Office, Friday.

MRS. LELIA KESTLER speaking—on a typical Washington July afternoon:

"Though murmuring 'Heap on the wood, the wind is chill,' I of course read that column of yours which records the barring of barmaids from Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Nevada. And I didn't miss your wonder as to what the feminists are going to say about American legislators' tendency thus to close, against woman, the door of a gainful occupation.

* * *

"As for me, I roll my own drinks.

"However, I have some imagination—and can use it:

"When there was a single barmaid for a single bar, the tips might have been worthy of an economist's consideration. But when there are six barmaids where one formerly presided, it seems to me that their menial and laborious occupation—far from being gainful—must be pretty poorly underpaid.

* * *

"Alas, the poor bar-lass!

"Although men—even legislators—may chase her, none of them will fight for her rights. Her sisters of the leisure class ignore her. I 'hae me doots' if there is anyone in these United States who will help her retain her occupational heritage.

"There seems nothing for her to do but follow Marie Antoinette's suggestion about the poor of Paris: eat cake. And nobody can eat cake and have it, too!

"Suppose we ask Gracie Allen?

* * *

"It requires no courage to legislate against barmaids, but it does take courage to legislate against the forces in the background—to revoke a bar proprietor's license when he proves himself irresponsible or to forbid the sale of drinks to mentally immature persons . . . It is idiotic to hold barmaids responsible for the morals and drinking habits of chance customers.

* * *

"Again: Barmaids and waitresses are not organized to fight against competitive situations in gaining a livelihood, and moral cowards are disposed to bully the weak. Most so-called 'protective measures' are discriminating . . .

"We all object to parasites in our civilization, yet the men among us reserve to themselves the work that women must do!

* * *

"Two things are necessary:

"(1) Children must be taken out of the factory.

"(2) For the same work, a woman worker must be paid the same wages as a man worker.

"This view was stressed by Associate Justice Butler, who read the Supreme Court's majority opinion invalidating the New York minimum wage act:

"'We cannot accept the doctrine that women of mature age require or may be subjected to restrictions upon their liberty of contract which could not lawfully be imposed in the case of men under similar circumstances. To do so would be to ignore all the implications to be drawn from the present-day trend of legislation . . .'

* * *

"It is grimly farcical that the values of civilized existence must be measured in terms of sex. Whatever the real reasons for laws that forbid the employment of women as barmaids or waitresses in places serving intoxicating liquors, the whole thing smacks of 'pussyfooting' and hiding behind the barmaids' skirts.

"The fact that four of the five States to enact such laws are Atlantic Coast States, having many seaport towns—with much loading and unloading of vessels and a great many factories—may have some bearing on the problem. But the principal industries of Nevada are mining and divorcing. There is no doubt that girls are employed as barmaids and waitresses because of the low wages they will accept . . .

* * *

"Great sport, drinking! It has a high escape-quality—escape from everything: home and boredom. Bragging becomes an important element in the fun of the whole thing. Yet, when the drinker is sufficiently relaxed—when the subconsciousness is talked-out on the conscious level—even a barmaid must be glad to run to cover.

"Surely it is beyond sense and reason that men should seek to bring about the condition that prevailed before prohibition, when three out of every four corners in crowded neighborhoods were occupied by saloons, and when every mother worried about every boy. The old way, and a respite from being civilized!

* * *

"Isn't it just possible that in all this controversy the barmaid is only a shadow, and that the real complaint should be lodged against the drinker? . . .

* * *

"Anyhow, you, Mr. Post-Impressionist, asked for my sentiments. Well, 'them's they.' You used the 'right tackle.' But you may feel that the fish which you have caught is only a 'croaker.'"

* * *

We don't feel anything of the sort. What we fear is that we have caught a man-eating shark.

But we think that there is almost as much to be said for this carcharodon carcharias as she says for herself.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Army Engineers.

Eastport, Me.—The case of the United States Army engineers selected for the nonmilitary duty of spending hundreds of millions of dollars, sometimes under definite time restrictions, is strongly reminiscent of the plot of "Brewster's Millions." In that fantastic job of fiction a young man was called upon to get rid of a fortune in a limited time under limited conditions and found himself with a cash balance on his hands as the deadline approached.

I believe they were on a yacht at sea in a storm, unable to get ashore to spend the last $50,000, when someone told the hero of the piece that it would cost $50,000 in salvage charges to fire a signal of distress. At which he touched off the rocket, went broke in the nick of time and was saved to enjoy a success achieved when all had seemed lost.

The Army engineers constitute a form of coolie labor in their line. They are the Brain Trust of the United States Army, but the number of officers in the corps so far exceeds the strictly military assignments with troops that many of them go along for years on detached duty.

* * * *

Soldiers they are, to be sure, also keeping their uniforms ready on the hangers and their ears alert for the call of the bugle, but their abilities mark them for long periods at other duties in the service of other branches of the Government on loan from the War Department.

This seems very agreeable to the War Department. It pleases the Army's pride that Army men are found indispensable in the construction of dams and levees and model towns, and the work provides valuable experience for men who will be just that much more able in time of war.

Moreover, as Government accounting is coldly practical, the departments which borrow the engineers naturally are expected to reimburse the Army for their pay and perquisites, relieving the Army of that proportion of its peacetime running expenses.

This is a small item, however, for the pay of a lieutenant colonel, which is the rank in command of the Passamaquoddy job, is only $5,000 a year plus $1,200 for quarters, heat and light. The other Army engineers on the projects are captains, who cost the taxpayers about $3,500 per head per year.

* * * *

Among them they have had the responsibility of spending, according to their orders and the law and the specifications of the job, a kitty of $7,000,000, marked down from an original figure of $37,000,000.

A civilian district engineer in Col. Phil Fleming's place would hardly consider himself overpaid for his services and responsibility at one-half of one per cent of the amount involved, which would be $35,000 a year, according to my simple expense-account arithmetic. The subordinate engineers, corresponding in service and responsibility to the Army captains on duty at Passamaquoddy, would be high-priced men, too.

As far as I know, there has been no complaint from civilian engineers of this Army competition in their profession, but the case does seem roughly parallel to that of the doctors who decry socialized medicine and the "economic royalists" who deplore the intrusion of the Government in business, especially the power business.

* * * *

The Army engineers, however, have no voice in the matter. As soldiers they are under orders, and, while they naturally take pride in their work under those orders, they do not lobby for the jobs or regulate their own pay.

I imagine that some of them would not protest too much if it should be proposed to solve the coolie labor situation in their case by paying them the same fees that work would command if civilians were employed. Others, however, would be sure to object lest the higher rewards for engineers on loan to the Government arouse envy in other branches of the Army and dissension in the service.

But returning to Brewster and his stage money, the hero of the fantasy was a Saturday night sport with a pocketful of nickels compared to young Capt. Ike Lord, who has just tied loose from Quoddy and reported for work in the Resettlement Administration in Washington. His job is to spend millions of real money against time at a rate which Brewster never imagined. But that was fiction, and fiction is always cramped by the rather narrow rules of probability.

Schall

Academy and returning by auto to the Berwyn Heights estate from Annapolis, struck an oil truck on the Baltimore boulevard.

During the days that followed he was entrusted to the medical care of Maj. Coupal and became acquainted with Mrs. Coupal.

After the major's death, January 3, 1935, the friendship developed into a courtship which culminated in the recent marriage.

With the widow of Senator Schall, the bride and bridegroom and the bridegroom's younger brother and sister, Richard, 24, and Anne Padgett, 16, will leave shortly for their home on Lake Harriet, Minneapolis, Minn.

The sale of the Schall estate failed to materialize. Bidders, who were few in the crowd of several persons, refused to offer a price which Mrs. Schall, sr., and the agents of Shannon & Luchs, real estate brokers, felt would be acceptable.

However, the furniture from the big 12½-room house, located high above Indian Valley, was auctioned off for approximately $1,000.

This included the sale of a Plymouth sedan for $315, and a Lincoln Sedan for $175. A grand piano went for $40, a $300 mahogany dining room sideboard for $15, a corner cupboard to match, for $21.

Massachusetts Relief

By Earl G. Latham.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Boston.

MR. PICKWICK, that professional observer of human nature, would have found interesting materials in the relief programs in Massachusetts for a moral tract on obstacles to the practice of good works. For the Federal relief set-up in this State has had to survive not only the frontal attacks of political spoilsmen, but the serious, if minor disaffections of those groups with which the Administration has had to work. It is one of the paradoxes of the situation, however, that there is substantial agreement that Federal aid could not be discontinued without serious maladjustments to public finances, even though the State and its subdivisions are contributing proportionally more to the funds from Washington than three-fourths of the States in the Union.

Possession of such a plum as control of the administration of relief was a prize over which a contest was inevitable. The issue resolved itself into a tussle between Mr. Curley and the Administration faction of the State Democratic Party over Arthur G. Rotch, appointed State administrator of ERA in December, 1934, and continued in office when the Works Progress Administration was established.

The charges were that Mr. Rotch, who was a Republican, was using the WPA to build up a Republican machine. It was further alleged that he had allowed Republican mayors and selectmen to name local administrators who prevented deserving Democrats from securing employment. The WPA organization was seen as nothing more than an instrument for the destruction of Democratic candidates for municipal office in the cities and towns of the State.

The truth of the matter seems to be that Mr. Rotch declined the advice that he serve Democrats first. Moreover, the efficient functioning of the relief administration required the co-operation of the municipalities and towns because of the large degree of local autonomy which they possess. Not all of the municipalities were Democratic in their politics by a long shot, and wherever the political strength was Republican, control of the local administration inevitably reflected the prevailing opinion. That the charges of partisanship were not entirely disingenuous is to be seen in the fact that Mr. Rotch was also taken to task by the Massachusetts State Association of Selectmen, which is largely Republican in composition. They protested the local administration of relief because they weren't being kowtowed to enough, and adopted a resolution suggesting that they be empowered to recommend persons for employment, because the administration was failing to assist many worthy persons who merited assistance.

Curley Won Pyrrhic Victory Over Rotch.

IN AN ACRID exchange with Curley last December over an assertion by the Governor that relief in Massachusetts had broken down, Mr. Rotch came off the victor with flying colors. The altercation was climaxed by an expression of confidence from Mr. Hopkins in his Massachusetts representative, and approval of the policies he had assumed. The next month, however, Mr. Rotch resigned, as he had tried to do at least three times before his dispute with the Governor. Mr. Curley's success, if such it was, in creating a vacancy in the highest WPA position in the State, was a Pyrrhic victory, for he had destroyed his chance of influencing the nomination of Mr. Rotch's successor. Although he made a special trip to Washington to solicit the Massachusetts delegation in Congress, the selection was not made from any of the Governor's candidates, nor indeed from within the State at all. A. Paul Edwards, of New York, a former financial examiner for WPA in this area, was chosen as Mr. Rotch's successor. Mr. Curley was indignant; Mr. David I. Walsh was complacent.

Since that memorable engagement, WPA has been troubled by dissensions and disaffections in various quarters. Because of an excess of red tape and imperfect administrative co-ordination, wage payments from time to time have been delayed for days. This has resulted in protest marches and congregations of workers at the disbursing offices, one of the most notable occurring in January in Boston, comprised largely of women employed on the Boston Public Library relief project. Others have taken place in cities and towns on the North Shore, particularly in Lynn.

One of the reasons for this situation was the fact that payments at that time were made every two weeks to workers who were accustomed to live from week to week on Saturday pay envelopes, and who were at a loss to know how to budget for a two-week period. This was later corrected and the workers were paid by the week. The spontaneity with which these demonstrations kindle, however, carries a warning.

Quite as serious in its implications was the strike of building trades mechanics in Greater Boston, which threatened to become State-wide, in protest against the hiring of relief workers in preference to union members. These unions objected that employers with whom they had contracts were hiring cheap relief labor when members of the union were available and willing to work. The rule of PWA was, however, that 90 per cent of the men used on public works projects be taken from the relief rolls. The contractor could hire the other 10 per cent wherever he wished to fill key positions. A settlement was reached in ten days, resulting in a change of the PWA rule reducing the 90 per cent to 50 per cent, but it is possible that the long-run effects of the policy of the building trades mechanics are likely to offset the temporary advantages secured.

Labor Movement Stalled By Unions' Differentiation.

THE PROSPECTS of building a genuine representative labor movement in Massachusetts or elsewhere is diminished by the degree that the trade unions persist in differentiating between workers who have jobs and workers who have not. A feeling of bitterness against the unions is engendered in a situation like that involving the Boston building trades and the relief workers.

The other side of the argument, of course, is that employers who have contracts with unions should abide by them. In any case the use of the strike aggravates a deplorable competition for jobs among groups who should learn to act in unity. Some less provocative method of solving the grievance would have been more desirable.

Some of the so-called white collar projects have made difficult headway because of internal dissension. "Valley Forge," the play by Maxwell Anderson, was banned as a Federal theater project in the town of Plymouth because it was not reverent enough to the popular version of American history.

The record of the relief administration makes it unlikely that the difficulties which it has encountered will be more than a collateral issue in the fall campaign. The Federal relief set-up has escaped the notoriety it has achieved in some States, for it has not been used to maintain an election machine, and there have been no scandals involving corrupt public officials.

THE MAIN grievance has not been the actual administration of relief but the allotment of funds to the State. Out of the Congressional appropriation of $4,800,000,000 of last year, Massachusetts was allotted $144,829,364 up to December 1, 1935, with an additional allotment of $40,000,000 for the period until March 15, to take care of the monthly pay roll of $10,000,000. These sums represent roughly about 55 per cent of the total expenditure for relief, the State and its subdivisions having contributed the remaining 45 per cent.

A concrete example of this joint financing is the WPA project for the improvement of the Park street subway, here. The estimated cost of this project is $343,944.02, of which the Federal Government is contributing $210,553.25, while the City of Boston is furnishing $132,390.77. In this specific instance, the amount of the Federal contribution is about 61 per cent of the total, but even this proportion, which is fairly high in the State, is much less than the contribution of 90 per cent and more which the Federal Government has been making in such States as Alabama, Mississippi and South Carolina.

This disparity serves to heighten the widespread opinion in New England that the region is being exploited for the benefit of other sections of the country. This sentiment has more than once appeared in the history of New England. As long ago as the Federal Constitutional Convention of 1787, it was strongly feared that the Northern States would be discriminated against because of their greater wealth and numbers by more backward communities having voice in the Federal Union. This feeling was strong enough during the War of 1812 to give rise to talk of secession from the Union. A more recent example is the bitter resentment which the processing taxes provoked among New England manufacturing groups, who felt that they were being charged with the support of the Western farmers. Not a national outlook, to be sure, perhaps even provincial, to use the language of Mr. Wallace, but nevertheless an important factor in the attitude of the region toward the Administration.

Virginia's Milk Act Is Attacked Before 3 Judges

Counsel for Dairies, State Heard in U. S. Court at Alexandria.

The Virginia milk control act came for a test of its validity before a three-judge Federal court in Alexandria yesterday.

On the bench were Judge Luther B. Way, Judge Robert N. Pollard and Judge Morris Soper.

This was the first trial in a Federal court, and both State's Attorneys Edwin H. Gibson, who has the title of assistant attorney general, and John H. Barbour, and counsel for the Highland Farms Dairy and Luther W. High, of Washington, who instituted the proceedings, said outside the courtroom that this procedure was chosen as a short route to the Supreme Court.

After hearing arguments that lasted four hours, the court advised the lawyers they would have four days to summarize their briefs and their arguments.

The dairy and High, who are represented by Attorneys E. Randolph Williams and T. Jutson Moore, of Richmond, and Philip Rosenfeld, of Washington, are selling milk in the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax area at 10 cents a quart, contrary to the minimum of 13 cents, set by the Virginia Milk Control Board. They seek a temporary restraining order to keep the board from enforcing its regulations in this area.

Williams and Moore said grounds for their clients' action were that the act "interferes with interstate commerce, was an emergency measure, unlawfully delegates legislative power to the board and violates the due process of law provision of the Federal Constitution."

The argument was answered by attorneys for the State, who denied the charges and asserted that the milk affected was sold only in Virginia; that the act was passed with a view to permanency; that the State Supreme Court has passed on its right to fix prices and regulate production and distribution areas and that there has been ample time for review and appeal.

Soon after its passage in 1934, the act was brought before the State Supreme Court and declared invalid by a margin of one vote.

Before a subsequent review could be given, one of the State court justices died, and another was appointed. The court then revised its original decision after review.

Dairy Aids Farmer.

One of the largest dairies serving suburban Washington, Hazel's Dairy, of Falls Church, Va., yesterday announced it had increased by one cent a gallon the price it was paying farmers for their milk, without raising the price to their customers.

"We're doing this voluntarily because I feel the farmers ought to have more for their milk," said Hazel yesterday. "We live in the country, and understand conditions. I'm only sorry we can't pay more."

Wallace Maps Drought Relief For Roosevelt

Secretary to Confer With President at Hyde Park Next Week.

By the Associated Press.

After a conference with other officials, Secretary Wallace yesterday drafted a rounded picture of the drought problem and relief efforts for presentation to President Roosevelt at Hyde Park next week.

Simultaneously, the Great Plains drought area committee mapped an ambitious itinerary for inspecting the drought regions, winding up with a conference with the Chief Executive in the Dakotas next month.

With Mr. Roosevelt expected to reach Hyde Park tomorrow, Wallace's office said the Secretary probably would confer with him early next week.

Auto Tour Planned.

The committee prepared to leave Washington August 12 or 15 on an automobile inspection tour to terminate August 28 at either Rapid City or Aberdeen, S. Dak.

In his report to the President, Secretary Wallace will emphasize the importance of the meeting between the Great Plains committee and the planning commission for the Dakotas, Montana and Wyoming under the chairmanship of W. R. Ronald, Mitchell, S. Dak., publisher.

The four-State commission postponed from August 8 to August 23 an executive conference at Aberdeen for the purpose of exchanging views with the President's committee.

Likewise, the Secretary was expected to report that a "well-oiled" drought relief machine was in gear.

Conflict Ironed Out.

Wallace, officials said, found some conflict between bureaus when he reviewed the Government's drought set-up this week, and at a meeting of interdepartmental leaders mapped a program in which each was alloted definite functions.

The Department of Agriculture reported that because of the drought an increased amount of pork at seasonally lower prices was in prospect this fall and winter, and estimated that about 50 per cent of the total corn acreage in part of the main belt was damaged beyond recovery.

The report, emphasizing that not all prices were bound upward, said:

"More hogs will come to market next fall and winter and prices probably will decline seasonally in the fall months. A small corn crop this year probably will lead to some liquidation of sows and spring pigs in the next few months.

"High-priced corn probably will cause farmers to send hogs to market in 1936-37 at much lighter weights than they have averaged this year."

"By July 18 about half of the total corn acreage in the important producing area, which includes Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and South Dakota, was damaged beyond recovery for grain production."

Prospects are better, the report said, in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, but even in most of these States there were sizable areas where very little corn would make grain.

Britain Sets Up Soviet Credit of $50,000,000

London, July 30 (AP).—Soviet Russia tonight had the guarantee of $50,000,000 in British loans with which to buy British goods. Completion of the Anglo-Russian commercial agreement establishing the credit was announced to the House of Commons by Sir Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade.

The export credits guarantee department, Sir Walter said, will guarantee principal and interest—5½ per cent for five years. The credits, it was said, were regarded as on more favorable terms than the Soviet State previously had been able to obtain.

Choir Singer Loses Plea; Must Die for Drowning

Boston, July 30 (U.P.).—Last hope of life virtually faded late today for Newel Paige (Tiny) Sherman, 27, convicted "American tragedy" slayer and former Sutton model youth, when Gov. James M. Curley denied a parental plea and public petition for commutation of the death sentence.

Only through unanticipated eleventh-hour intervention can the 240-pound choir singer and former scoutmaster now escape the State prison electric chair.

Sherman is scheduled to die next week for the drowning of his wife Alice, 23, on July 20, 1935.

Two Accused of Murder.

Greensburg, Pa., July 30 (AP).—Murder charges were filed today against 30-year-old Kenneth Wagner and his housemaid, Mrs. Jessie Hankey, 25, in connection with the death Saturday of Wagner's baby daughter.

State Police Capt. Jacob S. Mauk quoted Mrs. Hankey as saying Wagner forced her to feed the child poison. Wagner denied the accusation.

World Collapse

Italians Convinced War Will Ruin Civilization, But Nevertheless They Feverishly Prepare For Next Conflict.

Editor's note: Italians, like other Europeans, hope war will not occur, but if it does they will be prepared for the struggle with one of the greatest armies that ever marched on the continent. Stewart Brown, United Press staff correspondent in Rome, gives the Italian view of the European situation in the following dispatch, fifth of a series of six dealing with the problems which may plunge Europe into war.

By Stewart Brown.

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Rome, July 30.—Italians, who have just completed the greatest colonial war in modern history, are now preparing for the possibility of an international conflict, but they hope it will never come, for they are convinced it might mean the collapse of civilization.

Italy joined the "satisfied powers" on May 9 when Premier Benito Mussolini proclaimed the annexation of Ethiopia, but the present European tension makes it impossible for him to relax the nation's military preparedness.

Il Duce still has more than 1,000,000 men under arms in Italy and East Africa. Why? Because, in his own words, he fears that the wild race for armaments and organization of new political blocs is rapidly forcing Europe to the brink of a conflict even more terrible than the World War. This opinion is shared by all Italians, from Il Duce down to the barefoot vendor in the winding streets of Rome.

Italian officials believe the chances of a European war within two years are only 1 in 10, but nevertheless Italy is proceeding with her military preparations as though the odds were reversed.

Will Italy fight beside or against Germany in the next war? Nobody knows, not even Mussolini himself, for the political map of Europe is changing so rapidly it is impossible to say what the alignment will be.

Prepares for Enemies.

But a cautious Italy is preparing for enemies in every direction, leaving nothing to chance.

The Brenner Pass, looking toward Austria and Germany, is heavily fortified. The Italio-Jugoslav frontier bristles with "pill boxes," trenches and emplacements. Roads leading into France and Switzerland are dotted by imposing camps of Italy's hand-picked Alpine troops. Every Italian port, since the threat of war between England and Italy, has been strengthened with antiaircraft batteries, heavy coast artillery, mine layers and flotillas of submarines.

In the last year at least a dozen new military airports have been established in Italy, especially in the south, Sicily and Sardinia, and air fields throughout the peninsula have been improved and enlarged.

Before the end of this year Italy plans to have 1,500 new airplanes, mostly high-speed bombers, in service, giving her almost 3,000 first-line planes. Fifteen hundred new student pilots were enrolled recently and are now engaged in active, vigorous training.

Key industries have been nationalized and are working for the government. The army is proceeding with a vast program of modernization and mechanization.

Mobility of attack and rapidity of mobilization are the guiding principles in Italy's unprecedented preparations for the next war.

"Test Mobilizations."

As a result of his experiments during the Ethiopian war, Mussolini believes he can throw the entire Italian nation into war overnight. The two "test mobilizations" of the African population during the African campaign were designed primarily to perfect the organization of the Fascist party for mobilization in event of a European crisis.

Persons close to Mussolini say he feels that Italy's ability to enter war at a moment's notice is his greatest diplomatic strength.

He believes this constant preparedness may be a powerful factor in imposing peace on Europe, because neither France nor Germany would like to have one of their fronts exposed to Italy's modernized legions. Respect for Italy's military prowess is increasing in Europe.

Mussolini's many speeches during and after the East African War all revealed a great preoccupation with the peace of Europe. Menaced by Britain and France in their attempts to halt his colonial program, Mussolini felt then that Europe's peace was endangered.

Now that the Ethiopian affair is dead but not forgotten, Mussolini believes the danger of an immediate war in Europe is vanishing, but he doesn't intend to relax his preparations until there has been a general settlement of the problems which are disturbing Europe.

Italians feel they rendered a service to peace by sponsoring the signature of the Vienna Pact ending a year's long bitter quarrel between Austria and Germany.

At least, they reason, Europe will not go to war over the Austrian question. This pact also removed a thorn in the side of Italo-German relations and should decrease the anxieties of France and Czechoslovakia regarding the future of Austria.

Mussolini is attempting to act as arbiter between France and Germany. He believes that unless the French and Germans settle their differences there can be no peace for Europe.

Mussolini settled his quarrel with Germany on July 11, when Chancellor Adolf Hitler signed a pledge to respect Austria's independence. The pact assures Italy that Germany's frontier will not be extended to the Brenner Pass, at least, temporarily.

Mussolini does not want Germany as a "too close" neighbor because it would create a problem with his own German-speaking population in the south Tyrol, which Italy annexed from Austria after the World War.

Italy refuses to join France in any system of pacts or alliances which tend to encircle or isolate Germany.

A majority of officials believe France's authority has declined so greatly she must abandon her attempts to dominate Europe's political affairs and confine herself to guaranteeing her own national security.

This gives the key to what Mussolini is now attempting to accomplish.

He wants no more European territory, but what he does want is to let Germany peacefully obtain some territory which she lost in the World War. This, he believes, would bring Germany back into the European fold and thus go a long way toward preventing another war.

Italy is ready to go to war to defend what she has won and keep her place in the sun. From Mussolini down there is not an Italian who hopes another war will come, but when it does the newly created Italian empire must be reckoned with.

$1,726,000,000 in Bonus

$1,836,213,950 in bonds, and $87,786,050 in small cash, or a round total of $1,924,000,000. This compared with an estimate in May that the cash outlay would be $2,237,000,000.

The eventual cost to the Government, however, will involve much more, as $507,000,000 borrowed from the Government life insurance fund still must be paid back in bonds, and another $60,000,000 must be paid to the banks which advanced loans to veterans on bonus certificates.

When this novel method of bond payment was decided on by Congress seeking a substitute for lump-sum payment in cash, leaders in speech after speech issued pleas to the veterans not to cash their bonus bonds immediately, but to hold them for interest. Administration officials said this method of delayed payment would involve much less of a strain on the Treasury. Nevertheless, Treasury officials are expressing surprise that as much as 40 per cent of the veterans apparently prefer interest-bearing bonds to immediate cash.

When the bonds were issued on June 15, there was an immediate rush to cash them, and in the first week ended June 20, $523,932,200 had been turned into banks and 243 paying postoffices for redemption. This was the peak. The following week, only $368,472,900, and in the third week, only $87,081,900 was redeemed.

In recent weeks there has been an even greater sloughing off in bond payment demands, so much so that a revision of the budget figures is said to be under consideration.

Week ended July 11.....$45,962,500
Week ended July 18.....$35,192,150
Week ended July 20.....$28,853,950

The bonds were issued in amounts divisible by $50, and odd sums were paid off in cash. The veterans were given the privilege of converting them into ready money at once, or of holding them for accumulated interest until the 1945 maturity date.

U. S. Crop Data Rocket Market To 6-Year Peak

Grains Lead in Advance; Wallace Says Corn at Worst Since 1881.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 30.—Prices of important farm commodities soared to the highest levels in six years today as markets revised their measure of the wide sweep of drought's crop destruction in North America.

In trade marts throughout the world, peak prices of 1936 for many farm products were posted in sudden recognition of the severity of losses in many types of feed and foodstuffs.

A special Government report indicating that in important producing areas half of the acreage planted to corn, the largest cash crop in the United States, was damaged beyond recovery, electrified corn pits at Chicago and Kansas City and prices shot up 4 cents—the limits permitted in one session.

According to Bureau of Agriculture Economics figures, damage inflicted by drought and heat in July caused the sharpest rise in farm prices that has occurred in any 30-day period since August, 1934. The general level of values, the bureau said, was lifted to the highest point since September, 1930.

Wheat, corn, eggs, butter, potatoes, rye and lard were among the commodities in which 1936 peak prices were set today in various Chicago marts.

The major grains were at season's tops in other domestic markets and wheat at Winnipeg and Liverpool, important world trade centers, was at the highest level, in some cases for six years.

The most sensational activity occurred today in the corn pits. The markets were influenced partly by a statement attributed to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace that only generous rainfall in the next week or 10 days could prevent the 1936 corn crop from being the smallest since 1881. He indicated the crop may be more than a billion bushels below normal.

Added to Wallace's pronouncement was a special Department of Agriculture report that in important corn areas, including Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Oklahoma and South Dakota, about half of the acreage was beyond recovery. This report indicated prospects were better in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota but even in most of these States there are areas where very little corn will make grain.

Bride Killed, Husband She Met on Bus Hunted

Los Angeles, July 30 (AP).—Two pistol shots ended the life today of 28-year-old Mrs. Vanthelia Hippe McCandless, waitress, married just six weeks ago in Yuma, Ariz., to a man she met on a transcontinental bus.

Mrs. McCandless' unclothed body was found in her bathroom by the manager of the apartment house in which she lived, Mrs. Polly Powell.

Patricia O'Day's Suit Contested by Husband

Los Angeles, July 30 (AP).—Patricia O'Day was charged with associating with other men and excessive drinking in a cross-complaint filed today by Dr. Clement J. Joynt to his film actress wife's divorce suit.

Miss O'Day once obtained his permission to go to San Francisco for her health, but instead accompanied a married man on a pleasure trip, resulting in the man's wife filing a divorce suit, Dr. Joynt charged.

Leadership in Star Rankings Changes Hands

By the United Press.

Hollywood, July 30.—Shirley Temple has lost the national box-office championship to Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, according to the Hollywood Reporter, trade paper, on the basis of questionnaires returned by 1,192 exhibitors throughout the country.

A similar survey made by the Quigley (trade) Publications a year ago placed Will Rogers at the top of the money-making heap, but with the passing of the Sage of Oklahoma, little Shirley, in second place, was hailed as queen.

The Astaire-Rogers team rated no better than fourth last year, but Clark Gable held third place in both checks.

The Leading Stars.

Ten top stars, according to the 1936 survey, were Astaire and Rogers, Temple, Gable, Norma Shearer, Claudette Colbert, Robert Taylor, James Cagney, Joan Crawford, Dick Powell and Myrna Loy.

Top-fighters in 1935 were Rogers, Temple, Gable, Astaire and Rogers, Crawford, Colbert, Dick Powell, Wallace Beery, Joe E. Brown and James Cagney.

Newcomers in the charmed circle are Taylor, a find of the year; Shearer and Loy, replacing Rogers, Brown and Beery. Addition of Shearer was no surprise, but the rise of Loy is harder to explain, since she was co-starred in most of her pictures during the 12 months.

Some Surprising "Lows."

Other rankings were: 11, W. C. Fields; 12, Mae West; 13, Irene Dunne; 14, Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald; 13, Charles Chaplin; 16, Gary Cooper; 17, Claude Lomard; 18, Edward G. Robinson; 19, Paul Muni; 20, Janet Gaynor; 21, Marx Brothers; 22, Eddie Cantor; 23, Marlene Dietrich; 24, Kay Francis; 25. Harold Lloyd.

William Powell was twenty-sixth; 27, Bette Davis; 28, Warner Baxter; 29, Joe E. Brown; 30, Jean Harlow; 31, Bing Crosby; 32, Fred MacMurray; 33, Franchot Tone; 34, Barbara Stanwyck; 35, Ronald Colman; 36, Al Jolson 37, Ginger Rogers (alone); 38, Merle Oberon; 39, Sylvia Sidney; 40, Cary Grant; 41, Joan Blondell; 42, Leslie Howard; 43, Katharine Hepburn; 44, George Arliss; 45, Ruby Keeler; 46, Robert Donat 47, Victor McLaglen; 48, Loretta Young; 49, Robert Montgomery, and 50, George Raft.

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, July 30.

Leigh Jason, who directed the flicker "The Bride Steps Out," stopped me while I was wandering about the Radio Studio to tell me that he discovered a movie boner in his own picture while reading the boners last week. Director Jason says that the flicker flaw printed) about Gene Raymond phoning Barbara Stanwyck and telling her to pack his evening clothes, and also Ned Sparks, was okay, because they really got all the clothes in a valise. A movie fan believed all that clothing couldn't be put into that one small valise.

STANWYCK.

However, claims Director Jason, "that item made me see a movie boner that I should not have allowed in the picture."

When Gene Raymond and Ned Sparks take their tuxedos out of the valise and put them on, the tuxedos are as neatly pressed as if they just had been delivered by the tailor.

"In the flicker 'San Francisco,'" writes Douglas Batton, "when Clark Gable was walking down the street to his night club, in the opening shot of the picture, he passed a saloon. And there was music coming from that saloon.

And if I'm not very mistaken, the little music heard was a few bars of "The Darktown Strutters' Ball."

"Knowing the date of the flicker and the date that the song was written, I'd say that the song was being played before it was written."

Carole Lombard, in "Princess Comes Across," insists Seymour Gilman, creates a sensation when she admits that she is not the princess. A newspaper photographer, with camera poised and flashlight bulb in place, is standing by while Lombard makes this statement over a national radio hookup. Lombard tells all, the crowd roars, she dashes away, and the newspaper photographer stands there with a dumb look on his face.

If I know anything about photographers, says Mr. Gilman, he would have snapped the picture, and if I know anything about newspapers, it was a bigger story because Lombard wasn't a princess. But I guess what counts is that the director didn't know anything.

Shirley Temple in the flicker "The Poor Little Rich Girl" is to go on the radio for Claude Gillingwater. According to Dave Amorosi, Gillingwater demands that his secretary get him a 15-minute spot on the radio for five nights a week. He insisted on 15 minutes. Yet when we are shown the debut of this program, a sign is displayed which reads: "Peck Soap Hour." "I have listened to many broadcasts," says Mr. Amorosi, "but never heard the announcer list the 15-minute spot as an hour."

Hersholt gets three letters from Ameche from America. Every letter has a 2-cent stamp on it. "Can this be the way," asks Mr. Katcher, "that they are trying to lower the cost of the production of the picture?"

About the Showshops

AS THE month of August heaves gently into view, so do definite playing dates for some of the most pretentious motion picture productions of the year. In the case of many of these super-super-extra-specials it was the expectation that we would have to wait until the "frost was on the pumpkin and the fodder in the shock," or something, before being vouchsafed even so much as a preview peek at the manifold superiorities that have made them great in anticipation. That is the way it used to be. Hot weather brought "cold" pictures and cold weather brought the "hot" ones. Everything is different now, except possibly the minor items of death and taxation.

BELL.

That is how it happens that almost before August has got its hat off, the big pictures will begin coming along. First on the list will be Katharine Hepburn in RKO-Radio's film version of Maxwell Anderson's blank-verse drama of "Mary of Scotland," in which Miss Hepburn, of course, assumes the title role, created on the stage by Helen Hayes at a memorable first night in the National Theater season before last. "Mary of Scotland," however, will beat the Warner Brothers' picturization of Marc Connelly's Pulitzer Prize winning play of "The Green Pastures" to public view by scarcely more than the widely celebrated and completely fictitious eyelash. According to present plans, it will burst upon an expectant Capital on next Thursday night, August 6, with the Connelly work hot on its heels Friday morning.

There will be none of that bargain two-for-the-price-of-one business when Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's Theater, presents "Mary of Scotland" on Thursday. The house will be closed after the last afternoon projection of the current bill and will reopen in the neighborhood of 7 o'clock for the sale of tickets to two night performances of the celluloid version of the Anderson play. While no doubt there will be a few distinguished invited guests present at the local premiere of this important picture, the first night will not be a reserved-seat showing, but open to the general public at the regular scale of admission charges on the first-come-first-served basis.

"The Green Pastures," as I understand it, is to be presented as the regular screen attraction for the week of Friday, August 7, at the Earle Theater, without deviation from the usual house policy.

A sketchy appraisal of "The Green Pastures" in its new form occupied this space on Wednesday morning. It is a work no discriminating picturegoer can afford to miss, preserving as it does every essential quality of greatness that was possessed by the original drama.

Of "Mary of Scotland," as yet, I cannot speak with quite the same personal conviction because these eyes have not been permitted to date to view a production that is reported from all sides to be an achievement of exceptional merit. This is a condition that will be overcome tomorrow afternoon, when "Mary of Scotland" is to be privately previewed by the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the local drayma desks. On Monday morning, then——

And still the air is thickly cluttered with those persistent rumors that such other significant works as "Anthony Adverse," the Warners' prodigious picturization of the Hervey Allen three-in-one novel, just previewed on the West Coast; "Romeo and Juliet," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film rendition of the Shakespeare tragedy, and the same company's "The Good Earth"—not to mention other productions of comparable magnitude—are only a matter of weeks away.

The prevailing 50-50 split of Paramount Pictures between the downtown first-run Warner Brothers' houses and Loew theaters will continue for another year, according to announcement made yesterday by Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the local Warner interests. Paramount will release 65 feature pictures during the 1936-37 season. Half of these will be shown first on the screens of the Earle and Metropolitan theaters, the other half at Loew's Fox, Palace or Columbia. The entire Paramount output of 65 pictures will, as heretofore, be shown in the Warner Brothers' neighborhood and suburban theaters, following the downtown first runs.

It begins to look as if it would be known as "Loew's Capitol" after polls have been closed and the ballots counted. I mean to say that with voting reflecting an unexpected public interest in the renaming of what now is known as Loew's Fox Theater, strong preference seems to be in the direction of "Capitol" as a suitable name for the largest of Washington's picture houses and one of the most representative amusement temples of its kind here or in any other city.

At the end of the third day of voting, "Loew's Capitol" was the choice of 3,431 patrons who cast ballots, leading its closest competitor, "Loew's President," by a count of 884. "Loew's Embassy" is still in the running with 2,285 votes, but seems to this column to be a little too close to "Ambassador" in connotation to be an ideal choice.

The volume of voting has been a source of amazement to the Loew executives, who anticipated no such response as has been manifested by the theatergoing public. In three days of balloting, a total of 14,279 votes have been cast. That's a lot of votes in any man's election.

These minor improvements usually escape public attention, but it may interest you to know that the Fox stage has been equipped with a new set of super-sensitive microphones that pick up the faintest sound and hurl it to the farthest reaches of the theater without distortion and that the Earle is bragging a little about a new mess of display frames on the Thirteenth street frontage of the theater edifice. "Sight and sound," as Dick Watts would say if he were writing it and this were the New York Herald Tribune. That's a good paper, too!

Culbertson on Bridge

A sensational hand has just been sent me by an Australian correspondent, James J. Newman. His letter declared:

"The following hand which was dtalt and played in a pennant bridge match in Melbourne in May, between teams captained by N. Mussen and V. Champion shows that the seemingly impossible can sometimes occur. The teams concerned are leading in a competition, and the gigantic swing of 3,300 on one hand is probably unprecented in competitive bridge.

"At Table No. 1, North and South called and made seven hearts, scoring 1,720 points. At Table No. 2, East and West called and made seven diamonds and scored 1,580 points on the same deal, but playing the opposite hands to those on which the grand slam was made at the other table."

This collossal hand was:

NORTH
♥ A K 8 6 4
♦ None
♣ K Q 7 6 4

WEST
♠ K Q 7
♥ 9 7

♥ None
♦ K J 9 7 4
♣ 9

SOUTH
♠ None
♥ Q J 10 5 3 2
♦ 8 3 2
♣ A 10 5 3

The bidding in room 1 was:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 heart	2 spades
4 hearts	4 spades	5 hearts	5 spades
Pass	Pass	6 hearts	6 spades
Double	Pass	7 hearts	Double

Result—Seven hearts bid, doubled and made, 1,720 points to North-South.

The bidding in room 2 was:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 diam.	1 heart	1 spade
4 hearts	Pass	Pass	5 diam.
5 hearts	Pass	Pass	6 diam.
Pass	Pass	6 hearts	Pass
Pass	7 diam.	Double	Pass

Result—Seven diamonds bid, doubled and made. 1,580 points to East-West.

Mr. Newmans' report continues: "Mr. Mussen's [North, room 1] reasoning, when making his seven heart bid, is interesting. Immediately upon completion of the hand, he told the writer 'East's two spade bid over my one heart bid indicated a two-suiter with at least six spades. West's support to four spades showed at least three, but probably four, spades in his hand. It is almost certain, therefore, that my partner is void in spades. Now my partner's support to four hearts over East's two spades shows me that hearts are safe and that she has another ace somewhere. My only gamble then is that it is the ace of clubs and not the ace of diamonds.'

"In room 2, West called seven diamonds primarily as a sacrifice. That she was permitted to make the contract was fortunate, as an opening lead of a club or a spade would have defeated her. North had a difficult choice of 'blind' leads to make and led the card which the majority of players would have selected, the ace of hearts."

I think a few comments by myself on the bidding will not be taken amiss by my Australian friends who may see this column.

It appears to me that, in room 1, North should not have bid seven hearts after his partner doubled six spades. The fact that six spades would have been cold except against a diamond opening lead and ruff does not constitute a valid objection to my remark because the real point is that South should not have doubled! A forcing pass was very much in order. Also, East was ill advised to gamble on setting a contract which, if made, would mean an enormous number of points. The safer course, by far, would have been to bid seven spades.

There was much more excuse in room 2 for North's double of seven diamonds. But even so, the same argument just advanced applies to this case also. Seven hearts would have been the more discreet bid.

Miss Sullavan Puzzles Coast With 'Hubbies'

Ex-Mates Favored in Turn as Temperamental Star Heals Broken Arm.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, July 30.—Film colony gossips are slightly dizzy trying to figure out the "alumni association" romances of Margaret Sullavan, pert, brown-haired film actress.

Last March Miss Sullavan announced she had obtained a Chihuahua, Mexico, divorce from William Wyler, director, whom she married in an elopment to Yuma, Ariz., in November, 1934, and at once was seen everywhere in company with Actor Henry Fonda, whom she had previously divorced.

Now she is seen with Wyler again, and Hollywood is unable to decide just who is the Sullavan head romancer.

Reports flew thick and fast that Sullavan might remarry Fonda—whom she wedded when both were on the stage—after they played opposite each other in "The Moon Is Our Home," last spring. Nothing came of it, however.

Broken Arm Mends "Break."

Then Sullavan broke her arm in a fall on the set after she replaced Marlene Dietrich in "I Loved a Soldier." She was forced to take a rest and the picture was shelved. As Sullavan's arm healed, apparently, so did her affection for Wyler, and now, almost every other day she bobs in to watch the director make "Dodsworth" on the United Artists' lot, or to help him criticize his day's rushes.

Recently, between takes, Wyler and Sullavan wandered off the stage into a studio side street, where they were observed in what seemed to be tender conference, Wyler holding her hand and patting her cheek.

A minute later, when they became aware windows had shot up and curious heads were sticking out, Wyler fled in one direction and Sullavan in another, both blushing furiously.

Navy Commends Lieut. Maulsby

Lieut. Robert J. C. Maulsby, naval aviator attached to the U. S. S. Memphis, has been sent a letter of commendation by Secretary of Navy Swanson for his effort to save two naval aviators who crashed to death in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, in June, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

The two naval aviators, Lieut. Robert W. Larson, nicknamed "Lucky" because he had escaped death in the Akron and Macon dirigible disasters, and Sidney L. Harris, were taking part in a practice flight when their plane collapsed and crashed into the bay.

Maulsby, who also was taking part in the flight, landed immediately and swam to the wrecked plane which was floating upside down. He dived and attempted to release Larson and Harris, but found them dead and discovered it was impossible to release their bodies which were pinned in the fuselage.

New Orleans Milk Blockade Is Lifted

New Orleans, July 30 (AP).—The milk blockade on New Orleans was lifted tonight.

New Orleans distributors met the strikers' demands for an increase in the milk price from $1.85 to $2.32 per hundredweight, or an increase of about 1 cent a quart, and agreed to purchase as much milk at that price as is usually bought during the winter months.

Henry G. Vernon, of Kentwood, president of the Dairy Farmers' Protective League, which called the strike last Saturday, notified all farmers to start shipping milk again tonight.

Indianapolis Enjoys Boom in Construction

The Indianapolis Times calls attention to the fact that the valuation of property being built and improved in Indianapolis had passed the $3,000,000 mark for 1936.

Thus far in July building permits, valued at $73,000, have been issued for 16 residences, as compared with four permits, valued at $20,400, for the same period in July, 1935.

Plan Outlined to British Commons Provides Joint Operation.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 30.—A projected transatlantic mail and passenger air service was announced today in the House of Commons by Sir Philip Sassoon, undersecretary for air.

Although Sir Philip set no definite date for the start, he said experimnetal flights would be conducted shortly.

Three aviation companies, he said, will combine to direct the service. They will be nominated by the government of the United Kingdom, the Irish Free State and Canada.

Imperial Airways, which for years has flown a regular service with the continent and India, will be nominated by England.

In return for landing facilities granted by the United States, Pan-American Airways will participate.

Fifty-one per cent of the capital subscribed, however, will be held in the United Kingdom.

Preference will be given, Sir Philip said, to the direct route across the Atlantic—via Newfoundland and Canada—but it may be necessary at first to operate by way of Bermuda in the winter.

The United Kingdom will finance the experimental flying which will be conducted co-operatively by Imperial Airways and Pan American Airways.

When the operating company assumes control it will receive an annual subsidy.

Promotions Made In Warner Force

Promoting from the ranks, as has been his custom, John J. Payette, general zone manager for Warner Brothers' theaters in the Washington territory, yesterday announced several important managerial changes in the Washington theaters, effective Sunday, August 2.

The continued illness of Charles Brennen, manager of the Metropolitan, required immediate filling of that post, and Mr. Payette has promoted Maynard Madden, manager of the Central, to the position. Nelson Smith will remain as assistant.

Replacing Madden at the Central will be Claude Land, who moves up from the Home Thetaer. Walter Cannon will remain as his assistant. Sidney Hoffman, assistant manager of the Earle Theater, will become manager of the Home, with William Courtney remaining as assistant.

Moving into Hoffman's vacancy at the Earle will be Jack Hopkins. Donald McFarlane will be promoted from chief of service to office clerk and Ernest Wells becomes the Earle's new chief of service.

SHERIDAN ROAD

By HELEN TOPPING MILLER

JUST BEFORE the dawn of a freezing morning in March, a beautiful girl calls a cab in front of a Chicago hotel. The driver swings open the door, a pistol falls to the sidewalk and Eden Faraday is staring at the dead body of a man, sprawling grotesquely on the floor of the taxi.

FROM THAT point on, Helen Topping Miller . . . author of "Sheridan Road" . . . takes you breathlessly through one of the best tales of romance, mystery and love that you have ever read.

BEGIN THE story today . . . and follow it to its startling conclusion, daily and Sunday, in The Washington Post.

Chapter One.

At 5 o'clock of a freezing March morning no street is friendly.

To Eden Faraday, shivering in her thin satin pumps and an evening cloak that warmed her ears, but left her knees to the cruelty of the wind, the familiar avenue that she walked every day seemed a heartless thoroughfare, iron cold, hostile and grim.

The pillar where a red globe burned wanly; the empty reaches of pavement, a rusty garbage truck clanking over manhole covers, all contributed to the desolation.

Worst of all were the two men who stood, one on either side of her, their hats down, their collars up, holding her with official firmness by the elbows.

They were big men and they were trying to be gallant, but long training in ruthlessness made their efforts a bit confused. They were plain clothes men and one of them had just rung the box summoning the patrol wagon. Eden Faraday was being escorted to the police station.

She was going gamely, her head held high, making the best of a wretched situation. She was a Faraday, and the Faradays, back to the old Kings of Ireland that her grandmother had boasted about, had been an undaunted clan. They had gone singing into fights and it was tradition that the last bit of a Faraday to perish was his defiant grin. So Eden gave the officer on her left the benefit of her dark lashes and a look that dizzied strong men before this.

"What'd you say, lady?"

"I said," Eden let it go, "that I should have put on overshoes."

"Looks like you women would freeze to death," the law agreed promptly.

"You needn't hold me so tightly. I won't move, I promise." Eden struggled to keep her teeth from clicking.

"You won't get hurt if you stand still and don't try any funny business."

"We don't trust no women, though," declared the other officer, "we had one blonde run out on us not long ago."

"I tried to tell you," Eden was patient, "the taxi driver reached back and opened the door—and there was this man sprawling—" she blanched and shivered with the horror of the thing she had just seen. "If you'd let me telephone, please——"

Eden or Gracie.

A siren shrilled. Eden Faraday shut her eyes. Back there under the hotel portico was the awful, clotted group drawn up around something that lay still. Men leaped down with stretchers, a taxi was driven away by a traffic officer and two uniformed policemen approached, escorting the frightened taxi driver.

Eden gave him a reassuring smile.

"I know you didn't do it," she said.

"I tol' 'em I didn't do it," the driver's lip shook, "and I tol' 'em you didn't do it, neither."

"Thank you. We'll come out all right."

Then the black, sinister wagon backed against the curb.

"Sorry—I'm not," Eden gripped the icy leather.

"You didn't put enough dope on your hair," grinned the man, "I'd know you anywhere." He shut the door.

The wagon roared through narrow streets deserted and bleak looking, past lowering buildings, closed and gray, and under an arched gateway where a red light burned, into a clean, stern looking court.

Another policeman opened the door. The two who had ridden inside were instantly tart and officious.

"Hurry up, you!"

"Who've you got, Dave?"

The tall young man came close and studied Eden coolly. He had a good head, a lean face, a weary mouth, and grave eyes.

"Good Guys—But Dumb."

"You're not Lincoln."

"Certainly I'm not. I'm Eden Faraday."

"She's not Lincoln, Dave."

"Think not?"

"I know it. I'm a photographer."

"Yeah?"

"Don't let them scare you," said this tall person to Eden, "they're good guys—but dumb."

"They haven't frightened me—they've been very kind."

She took courage as they ushered her into the police station. In an hour this absurd affair would be over. She would be back at home with Gran and Robin and her mother, drinking hot malted milk, wrapped in her old crimson kimona, telling over again the amazing events of the night.

She answered all their questions in a steady voice. She gave them the telephone number. She told them about Mr. McLachlan.

"I'm his secretary. He will identify me."

"S. B. McLachlan Furnishings?" the desk men thumbed the ragged telephone book.

"Yes—the Ellison Building. He sells linen and blankets to hotels. I was entertaining two customers for him when this—happened. A Mr. and Mrs. Ely from Tern Lake."

"She had a gun in her hand," interposed one of the officers who had brought her in.

"But—if a taxi door opened and a gun fell out and landed on your feet, you'd pick it up, wouldn't you?" Eden asked.

"It wasn't her, judge," piped up the taxi driver, "I betcha it was two guys——"

"Take him out," directed the desk man without looking up.

The driver was pushed through the door, protesting. Eden's heart sank. There was so much iron in the grim room; iron in men's eyes, in their voices, in the barred windows. The desk man dialed a number, picked up an instrument, spoke into it, then handed another telephone to Eden.

She took the instrument, spoke into it, her fingers shaking, her voice breaking into a sob in spite of her control. Then she gave a little cry.

"Gran!"

Gran's birdlike positive voice, so reassuring, so heavenly sweet to her, Gran asking sleepy, incredulous questions, her voice quickening with excitement.

"I called this taxi, Gran—and there was a dead man in it——"

"Who killed him?"

"O, Gran, I don't know. But I'm at the police station—Williams street—tell them I didn't do it."

The doorman at the hotel called a taxi for her. The driver opened the door, without leaving his seat behind the wheel. And there was a man . . . dead . . . on the floor of the cab.

Gran was not startled; she did not shriek or exclaim. Gran was never startled. Excitement stimulated her, made her swift and competent. Eden could almost see her standing in her old gray robe, her short gray hair vibrant, her black eyes snapping, her tiny fleshless body quivering with excitement. In her young days Gran Georgia Dryman then, had been an actress. She never forgot her theater.

"Please don't let mother worry, Gran?"

"She's sound asleep. They came in at two. Don't you worry, Edie—I'll take care of things."

The man at the desk, who had been listening at the other telephone looked respectful at the name of Martin Burke. Burke was the district attorney.

"Let her sit in the matron's room, Charlie," he ordered. "You can sit in there, Miss, till we get the straight of this business."

Eden followed the policeman. The matron's room was warm and quiet.

The chill and terror that had come with the grip of the officer's fingers on her arm, ebbed a little. The episode shed some of its horrid possibilities and began to take on the kinder coloring of adventure. She had time to breathe and think how terribly tired she was.

Somewhere beyond the iron door she could hear the pleading hysteria of the taxi driver. He was so young and scared and hungry looking. Absurd to think that he might have killed a man in his own car, then swung in under the blazing lights to pick up another fare. And yet, as the level-eyed policeman knew, stranger things happened. Girls as innocent as she had become involved in the stupidly clinging tentacles of laboring justice. Eden fought with fear again.

An Important Woman.

Her mother, Bridget Farady, was an important woman. Bankers were respectful to Bridget Faraday, but the young Faradays had long since ceased depending on their mother very much. She was so busy, her time so filled with interests. Eden and her young sister, Robin, and Coburn Faraday, their handsome, idle brother depended on Gran.

The door opened and the tall young man, who had identified himself as the photographer, looked in. He had abandoned his overcoat but he still wore the sad brown hat.

"I am tired."

He twisted in, guarding an overful cup from spilling. The coffee was boiling hot, the cup was thick, but Eden drank it gratefully.

"You're Bridget Faraday's daughter, aren't you? I'm Garnett—of the Tribune. How did you happen to stumble in this mess?"

Eden forgot Gran's admonition not to talk. This young man was so friendly, his eyes so quiet and purposeful, his voice so deep. Any one would trust him, even peppery little Gran. Gran liked young men. Eden told him about the Ely's who had wanted to watch the dancing till so late, about the taxi the doorman had summoned, the dead man lying in it, the cold frightened wait in the freezing street.

"They'll hold you as a witness, of course, but that's all," young Garnett was comforting. "I wouldn't worry." He was, she saw, a bit wistful and uncared-for looking. His shirt was faded, a button hung by a thread. But his mouth and chin were valiant and gentle. "The police don't mean to be rough—but they can't take chances. The women they shove in here are usually pretty tough."

"Like Grace Lincoln?"

"You look like her a little. Her hair is like yours—that pale shade of yellow, but she waves it differently. You're taller——"

"These heels perhaps."

"She looks like a nice girl—she was a nice girl. I knew her family—good people from up the shore. She just had rotten break, that's all. Married a chap thinking he was O. K.—found out he was running with Moran——"

Disturbing to be thinking about this Gracie Lincoln. Entangled, perhaps, in the coils of illegal misadventure as innocently as Eden. Now, as all the tabloids averred, she was a gunman's girl. Eden felt a chilly sort of unease creep up her spine. Her unhappy musings were interrupted as the door clapped open.

A man came in, blond, tall, well dressed and cool. Young Garnett jumped up, his eyes withdrew, he took the coffee cup.

"Hello, Field."

"Hello, Jack," said this newcomer. "Miss Faraday, I'm Owen Field from Martin Burke's office."

Eden stood up, her throat quivering again. She flashed an appealing look at Garnett, but he was on his way out.

"Good-by," she said huskily, "and thank you for the coffee."

"That's all right. Good-by."

The man called Field closed the door deliberately, advanced a pace, studying her. Eden pulled her cloak over her shoulders and stared back at him as courageously as she could.

"I'm not going to talk," she said, "and I'd like a lawyer, please. Every accused person is entitled to counsel. That's the law. I know that much about the law." Field laughed happily.

"My dear girl, what do you think I'm here for?"

"I suppose you want to convict me of something. Isn't that the business of the district attorney?"

"It's our business to convict if they're guilty, however, I was sent here by Mr. Burke for quite another purpose. Would you mind sitting down?" He had a nice voice, pleasant hazel eyes, well-made clothes and an easy, confident manner. Eden returned to her chair but she did not relax.

"You understand, Miss Faraday," Field went on, "that this is murder and that you can help us a great deal by telling us all that you know?"

"But I've already told the police all I know—there's nothing else. The door man called the taxi, the driver opened the door for me without getting out of his seat, the gun bounced out—I was startled, of course—I picked it up—and there was this man, on the floor of the taxi——"

"And you have no idea who this dead man was?"

"Absolutely none."

"You have a family?"

"My mother, Bridget Faraday—she sells gowns, you may know—and my grandmother."

"Thank you. That's all, Miss Faraday. We'll call you as a witness, you understand. Also, we'll protect you!"

"Protect me" her voice came faintly.

"You may need protection. We hope not—but we will be prepared. The man in the taxi was Grappi."

"Grappi!" she whispered the name. It was a name that, for months people had spoken with lips a little tensed.

"Don't worry," Field was reassuring, "we'll take care of anything that may arise." He opened the door. Eden returned to her chair but she did not relax.

There was Gran. Gran's hat was on crooked, she looked hastily assembled and excited, but she was the same splendid, comforting Gran. She held out her arms and Eden rushed into them, felt instantly safe, warm and tremulous.

"Well, Jailbird!" Gran exclaimed, "what a credit to the family you turned out to be!"

The coffee was boiling hot. The cup was thick. But Eden Faraday drank it gratefully. The young man with the sad brown hat asked her if she were Bridget Faraday's daughter. "I'm Garnett—of the Tribune," he said. "How did you stumble into this mess?"

him when he was strutting around the Loop with a carnation in his buttonhole and devilment in his mind. I said, don't you dare to draw another breath, Mat Burke, till you get my girl out of this mess! So he sent this young what's his name—!"

"Field, Gran."

"No matter. He was a good looking lad, any way. Now you drink this and then tumble into bed."

"O, Gran, I can't. I'll have to go to the office."

"Office? Are you out of your mind? You're not going out of this house. I'll tell old McLachlan it was all his fault anyway sending a young girl out all hours of the night!"

"I've done it dozens of times before. No one could foresee a thing like this—it wouldn't happen again in a thousand years."

"Well, you go along and don't talk any more. O, did we wake you up, Bridget?"

Eden turned. Her mother stood in the door, blinking, beautiful even in her dishevelment; her lovely, remote, capable mother who had always been too busy to trouble about them very much.

"What on earth? Are you just coming in at this hour, Edie?" Bridget Faraday asked in her rich, husky voice.

"You go along to bed, Edie; I'll explain things to your mother. Wait! I'm going to give you one of my tablets."

"But Gran, why have you got your hat on?" pursued Bridget, pushing back the net that held her bright chestnut waves.

"But—why wasn't I called? What is all this, Eden?"

"You aren't called usually!" Gran's eyes showed faint steel. "Go along, Faraday, watching her daughters tuck fur collars under their white chins said, "Going out, dear?" but never, "where?" never, "with whom?" If they confided a name, star-eyed with eagerness for life, she asked, perhaps, smoothing her lipstick, "Do I know him? Is he nice?"

Pictures spinning, spinning through Eden's brain. Why did newspaper men wear belted overcoats? Gran would have sewed the button on Jack Garnett's shirt and fed him hot stew and rolls with butter melting in their feathery hearts.

She must sleep. Poor old Mr. McLachlan would be dismayed and unhappy. He was kind—and lately his business had not been good. Eden stumbled up and put some camphor on her temples. Instantly the door opened and Gran put her head in.

"Lie perfectly flat and breathe from your diaphragm," she ordered.

To her surprise when she stirred again Eden found she had been asleep for hours. It was afternoon and her young sister Robin was standing beside the bed, a glass of milk in her hand.

"Malted. Gran says you have to drink it."

Eden jerked up, confused, regarding the fading light in the west. "Heavens, why did you let me sleep all day?"

"Gran's orders. She's the boss. Here—swallow this infantile mess."

"I feel ghastly. Gran's pills are paralyzing. Have the papers come? Are things horrible?"

"Pomona bought all the lurid ones. You're quite famous. It seems this Grappi was very important—the banker of the underworld or something. Your taxi driver begged the police to keep him in jail when he found out who his murdered passenger was." Robin sat on the foot of the bed.

She was smaller than Eden, rounder with a glint of gilt in her eyes and fruity tints in her hair. A green knitted frock fitted her soft, small curves, her throat was white and petal tinted with a little kissable shadow at the base of it.

"Martin Burke?"

"The man who telephoned had a deep, thrilling bass voice," said Robin. "Some one who was obviously impressed with you. How does it feel to be a character in a 'Who done it.' Eden?"

Sidney Creighton.

"Horrible," murmured Eden, feelingly.

"Tall?"

"Slightly seedy, too. He asked how you were and then went away again. You must have stunned them at the police station. I'm expecting the judge himself to call up at any moment."

Eden went to the mirror, brushed her hair slowly. Her arms hurt—she looked at them in the mirror, found a dark bruised spot above one elbow. A souvenir of those moments in the custody of the police. She rubbed it ruefully.

"Was mother much annoyed?" she asked.

"You never know about mother. She keeps that business face on eternally. She was leaving when I got up, but I heard her telephoning a lot of people before that."

Eden studied herself in the glass. She saw there a slim girl, medium tall, with a pearl white skin, smooth hair and big eyes, faintly shadowed. A mouth a trifle too straight, a chin an edge too firm for beauty—Gran's small dominating chin.

"Not pretty, but it gets you through a lot," Gran said often.

"I wish," Eden's white fingers shaped her small, fine head, "that mother wouldn't see so much of Sidney Creighton."

"How can she help seeing him? He owns the controlling interest in her business?"

"I rather like Sidney Creighton," Robin was slightly airy, "he has saddle horses on his shore place. He promised to let me ride some warm Sunday."

"Skip It."

"Whenever he looks at me," Eden declared, "I can feel his mind going over me—like horrid fingers. His smile and manners are too finished. He isn't sincere."

"Thank goodness," said Robin, "I haven't an analytic mind."

"You haven't any mind at all, dear child. You have a fluff of cotton perfumed with expensive French scent. That's why history and mathematics won't stick in it."

"No," Robin rolled over on the rumpled bed and tucked a pillow under one ear, "that's not the alibi. The teachers are all great brooding beings from the Neanderthal strata. They have big, strong eyes and they give forth burning facts with mechanical persistence, but they are no more alive than so many totem poles. History is dead enough, but when you get it in tomblike moans from some hollow-chested museum piece in woolen stockings it's simply anesthetic. I never return to consciousness till I pass the park on my way home."

"It costs money to send you to Miss Gant's, Robin." Eden was gently reproachful.

"And a total loss if you ask me. How about lending me the loan of your black chiffon tonight? I have a heavy dance date."

"O, as usual! Nothing exciting comes my way. At least he has a car, the precious sap."

"That dress would be too old for you, Boby."

"Too old! Sacred cat! Am I supposed to be an adolescent? Half the people we meet think I'm older than you. It's your big baby eyes and that demure way you've got."

"I have to be careful of my clothes," Eden was reluctant, "they're part of my job."

"O, well—skip it, if you're so parsimonious."

"You know it's not that. But dressing up for these hotel people who want a hundred dollars' worth of returned youth with every dozen dinner napkins cuts into my commissions. When times are better and I'm back on salary it won't matter."

AND CALL IT ACCIDENT — Conclusion

"Found Ruth?"

"She was in the castle all the time."

"Who found her?" he asked.

And then slowly he asked a question to which confidently he believed he knew the answer: "D'you mean she's dead?"

Iris said nothing for a while. Then she shook her head. "They were in time to save her from an awful death. She had fallen into the oubliette. Some one had lifted off the lid."

"She must have fallen in when making that last round she mentioned in her letter to me," he said as if to himself.

"Who told you all this, Iris?"

"Mr. Dwight telephoned from the garage at the manor house."

"What had he to do with it?" he said harshly.

"I don't know. But he seems to have been there when she was found—he, John Pendervil and old Troutbeck, all three together."

"But how did they get into the castle? The keys won't be there till tomorrow morning," it was again as if he was speaking to himself.

"I gave George Dwight the keys to post. He must have gone down there, and taken them with him."

She was still gazing intently at her husband. But no muscle moved in his pallid face.

"He said they were awfully afraid, when they brought her up from that awful pit, that she would die. But she's coming round now, and she's staying on at the manor house till she's fit to be carried on to a boat at Plymouth bound for America."

"I see," he said dully. And then again he said, "I see."

Iris came forward into the room and sat down. Not by Phillip, as she would have done yesterday, but on a chair some way from him.

He rose and went into his dressing room. And then suddenly he thought he would like to say something to her—he could not have said what—and he opened the door.

She was standing with her back to him, and he saw her pour out what seemed to him an enormous dose of her dangerous, potent dope. Before he could speak, she had drunk it, and then turning round, she saw him standing in the doorway.

He felt cut to the heart, for she had not called him her "dearest," or her "darling," or "my love."

"I have got two or three letters to write and post before midnight," he called out. "You go to bed. I'll be very quiet when I come up."

"Is it?"

"Yes."

Then she suddenly ran toward him, and he took her in his arms. "O, Iris!" he whispered, "I wonder if you know how much I love you!"

"I didn't know till tonight," she whispered back. "No two poor wretches ever loved one another more than we have done."

Their lips met, and then it was as if he tore himself away from her. She undressed quickly, and got into bed, for she was beginning to feel what to herself she called "curiously muzzy."

When he came into the room the next morning he had a revolver in his hand and, lying down by his dead wife, he pressed it against his forehead, and touched the trigger.

Lord John Pendervil came into his mother's sitting room. He looked sad and weary, and well he might look both, for he had just been to Plymouth to see Ruth Starling off to America, and he knew that she had made up her mind never to come back.

He was dreading his mother's questions, when suddenly he felt relieved, for she exclaimed:

"I have had a most extraordinary letter from a man called Rawle. I cannot make head or tail of it. You will have to deal with it for me. Of course, I am not concerned in any way with poor Philip Trefane's affairs. It is fortunate indeed that that stepdaughter of his has her own money, and that we shall never have to take any trouble over her."

"I shall always feel responsible for Helen Bates, and I hope you won't mind having her here during her holidays."

"I shall mind very much," she said crossly. "But of course I shall do as you wish, John. Meanwhile, look at that!"

He took the letter handed to him, and this is what he read:

6 Johnson Square,
London.

Most Noble Lady:

I am sure you cannot be aware that the late Capt. Philip Trefane died owing me a very large sum of money. In addition to an old debt of £1,500, I had advanced to him last July an equal sum, which consisted of the first premium paid on an insurance of £50,000, which he had effected on the life of Miss Ruth Starling, the American lady who had signed an agreement which, in addition to promising him £2,000 a year for five years undertook to spend £40,000 over forthcoming theatrical productions.

As you will see by the inclosed account, the late captain owed me a sum falling not far short of £4,000.

I understand that you were his aunt, and that you have been paying certain debts left by the unfortunate man. That being so, I think you will feel that I am entitled to ask you to settle this account.

Believe me to remain, most noble lady,

Yours faithfully,

DOLLINGER RAWLE.

In a voice which her son tried to make studiously indifferent, he observed, "You have two courses open to you, mother. One is to send this letter to Mr. Singleton. The other is to burn it, and never mention its contents to any living being."

"Of course I shall send it to Mr. Singleton," she exclaimed.

"I should not do that in your place, mother."

"And why not?"

"May I recall to you the fact that in the company of Philip Trefane Ruth Starling was nearly drowned? You will also remember that the annex was burned to the ground after he had arranged that she should sleep there. Lastly, he was the last human being to leave the castle with the exception of Ruth herself."

"John——"

She rose from her chair, and he saw that she was trembling violently. Without speaking, she tottered across to the chimney where burned a small wood fire, for the days were drawing in, and she was an old woman.

Flinging the letter he had handed her back onto the leaping flames, she watched it burn.

[The End.]

Senor Trucco Leases Home At Bluemont

Ambassador, 3 Daughters and Niece to Join Colony There.

Blue Ridge Mountain Town Gaining Popularity as Resort.

By Dudley Harmon.

Another diplomatic family has been added to the list of those who have taken houses at Bluemont. The Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, recently signed a two-month lease for the estate of Mrs. Antonio Sholler, and with his three daughters and his niece will go there August 5, when he returns from a brief vacation at Ocean City, N. J.

In addition to the Ambassador of Chile, other well-known summer residents are the Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso; the Brazilian Ambassador, Mr. Oswaldo Aranha, whose family has been there the entire summer; the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wennerberg, who have the residence occupied last year by the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Baroness van Breugel Douglas; Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, and the Assistant Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy, Lieut. Comdr. Raul Reis.

Popular as Resort.

Residents of Bluemont have seen many changes in their town since five or six years ago, when diplomats discovered how conveniently near the Capital it is. Originally only a few Washingtonians maintained summer residence there. Included among them were Mr. A. A. Speare, whose home has been leased this summer by Representative and Mrs. Bloom; and the late Frank Carpenter, well-known author of travel books.

The estate of Mr. Carpenter, who was a pioneer in the development of Bluemont, is now owned by his daughter, Mrs. Frances Carpenter Huntington, and this summer, as last, is occupied by the Italian ambassador, Signor Rosso.

Mrs. Huntington's other home in Bluemont, Journey's End, is leased to Mrs. Margaret Bruce, of Washington, as Mr. and Mrs. Huntington and their daughter, Joanna, are in Europe. Mr. Huntington was formerly attached to the United States Embassy in Moscow, and has written numerous articles on that country. His wife, also, is an author. Following in the footsteps of her father, she has written several travel books, although hers are for children rather than grown-ups.

Home on River Bank.

Most of the Bluemont homes are high up in the Blue Ridge Mountains, but that of the Chilean ambassador is at the foot of the mountain on the bank of the Shenandoah River. A great, rambling house, built of stone, like most summer residences there, his home is furnished in the German style, with large, heavy chairs and tables.

Shortly after they move into their new home, the Chilean ambassador and the Senoritas Trucco will be joined by Senora de Huneeus, wife of the first secretary of the Chilean embassy, who will visit them for several weeks.

Fahnestocks to Return From Abroad in August

Col. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, who have been traveling in Europe since early summer, will return to this country August 26 and will go to their Newport villa for the remainder of the summer.

Mrs. Fahnestock's mother, Mrs. James M. Beck, already has returned from Europe and is spending some time at the seashore before opening her home in Washington.

The Foleys Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard P. Foley, who have just returned from a two months' tour of Europe, entertained at a dinner party last night at the Shoreham Terrace. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. George B. McGinty, Mr. and Mrs. John E. McClure, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Wolfe and Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Smith

Home From Seattle.

Mr. Bernard Gufler, foreign service officer with the Eastern European Division of the State Department, has returned from Seattle, Wash., where he went on a month's vacation. He made the trip West by plane.

To Be Wed in September

Hessler Studio.

MISS BARBARA C. DUNN,
daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henderson Dunn, whose wedding to Mr. F. Shepard Johnson, of Stone, Staffordshire, England, will take place in September at her parents' summer home in Lee, Mass.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

The Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, the Marquis of Sant'Orsola, will leave today for a trip to Boston, Maine and New Hampshire. With the Marchioness of Sant'Orsola, who, with her children, has been sojourning at Peckett's, on Sugar Hill, N. H., he will go for a short stay with Capt. and Mrs. Puleston at their summer home near Portland, Me.

Later the Marquis will go to Sugar Hill, returning to Washington in two weeks.

The Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. R. Walton Moore, accompanied by his niece, Miss Nancy McCandlish, and his nephew, Mr. Sheild McCandlish, has returned home to Fairfax, Va., from a cruise aboard the steamship Fort Amherst. They visited Nova Scotia, St. Pierre and Newfoundland.

The Air Attache of the Chilean Embassy, Squadron Commander C. Alfredo Puga, will leave next week for Detroit to watch the maneuvers of the United States Army scheduled to take place there. He will remain for three weeks.

Mrs. Emlen Davies entertained at dinner at her cottage at Sugar Hill, N. H., in honor of Justice and Mrs. Timothy Ansberry and Mr. and Mrs. John W. Guider.

Mrs. Lee P. Warren, of Washington, gave a dinner in the colonial room of the homestead at Hot Springs for the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, Mr. and Mrs. Fay Ingalls, Mr. and Mrs. George Warrington, Mrs. Ingalls Sard and Mrs. Fleming Newbold.

Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss is among the Newport residents who have taken boxes for the dance to be held at the naval training station auditorium in Newport on Saturday for the benefit of the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A.

The Federal Housing Administrator, Mr. Stewart MacDonald, will return on Tuesday or Wednesday from a vacation trip to the West Coast. He stopped for several days at the St. Francis Hotel in San Francisco and visited friends in Los Angeles.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue and Mrs. Guy T. Helvering have as their guests for two weeks Mr. and Mrs. Richard King, of Evanston, Ill. Mrs. King, the former Miss Julia Koster, resided with Mr. and Mrs. Helvering in their apartment at the Mayflower until her marriage last November.

Dr. and Mrs. H. Clifton King have left for a trip to Florida. They will be gone 11 days.

Miss Margaret Karr, of Bethesda, Md., is at the Hotel New Weston in New York.

Maj. and Mrs. Jesse Miller and their young daughter, Jane, who have been at their summer home in Bluemont since June, left yesterday by motor for Wabanski Lodge, Monmouth, Me.

Miss Alice West is passing the week in Norfolk, Va., as the guest of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Lester Baker, who make their home at the Shoreham Hotel, will close their apartment and will be at the Marlborough-Blenheim Hotel in Atlantic City until the middle of September.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Young have returned from Virginia Beach, where they stopped at the Cavalier Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hendrix, of Washington, are now in New York City and are stopping at the Hotel Vanderbilt, where they will remain for a few days before returning to their home in the Capital.

Miss Martha Wyatt Ennis sailed for Europe on Wednesday on the Queen Mary as a member of the Waters Student Travel Club. During the trip she will visit relatives in London. She is a daughter of Mr. C. C. Ennis, of the Carnegie Institution.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce McClure, of Washington, are visiting friends at the Hotel Brevoort, New York City, where they will remain for a brief stay.

Mrs. Douglas, S. Pinkney Tuck Wed in Paris

A dispatch from Paris announces the marriage there on Wednesday of Mr. S. Pinkney Tuck, First Secretary of the United States Embassy in France, to Mrs. Katherine Whitney Demme Douglas, of Detroit. Their engagement was announced last May.

The United States Ambassador to France and Mrs. Jesse I. Strauss and the bride's mother were witnesses for the ceremony, which took place place in the Town Hall of the fashionable sixteenth arrondissement.

Mr. Tuck's first wife was the former Miss Beatrice Beck, daughter of Mrs. James M. Beck, of Washington, and the late Mr. Beck, one-time Solicitor General of the United States.

After her divorce from Mr. Tuck in 1934, she was married in a quiet ceremony here in April to Col. Snowden Fahnestock, son of Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, of this city. Col. and Mrs. Fahnestock are at present in Europe.

Mrs. Beck, who sailed for Europe several weeks ago, has returned and is in Atlantic City with a member of the family. She will not return to Washington for sometime.

Mrs. Tuck is the former Miss Katherine Demme, of Detroit. She was formerly married to Mr. Dwight D. Douglas, of Grosse Point, Mich.

Attache Greets Auto Caravan

Reception Is Held for Members of British Car Club.

Commander A. L. P. Mark-Wardlaw, Assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy, was among those who welcomed the visiting British motorists yesterday afternoon at the informal reception and dinner given in their honor at the Shoreham Terrace by the National American Automobile Association.

The visitors, who have been at the Shoreham during their 48 hours in Washington, include the Hon. Brian Lewis, son of Lord Essenden; Carroll Dugdale, son of Lady Eva Dugdale; Capt. Stuart Burt, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Burt, Mrs. Nancy Morhan, Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Symons, Maj. Douglas-Morris, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. White, Mrs. H. Christian Jones, Miss J. Christian Jones, Miss Smythe Ritchieson, Mr. Graham Lyon and Miss Sheila Carlisle. They are leaving early this morning in their cars to continue their tour of Eastern and Central United States.

The motorists accepted the offer of members of the English Speaking Union for transportation on their sight-seeing yesterday afternoon. They lunched at the National Geographic Society's headquarters, and later motored to the White House and to Mount Vernon.

Dinner on the Shoreham terrace followed the late afternoon reception. The visitors were greeted by Commander Mark-Wardlaw, Mr. George Offutt and Mr. Russell Singer. Mr. Graham Lyon, prominent British sportsman, responded.

The visitors comprise the younger motoring enthusiasts of Great Britain. The trip is sponsored by the Junior Car Club of Great Britain, which is the "sporting group" affiliated with the Royal Automobile Club. Many of the women in the party are members of the club, and participate regularly in the "trials," which are efficiency tests, hill climbing and long-distance tests, also in numerous "rallies," of which this trip is one.

Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

The Military Attache of the United States to Warsaw, Poland, Maj. John Winslow, who has been in Washington after a visit to his home at Millbrook, N. Y., now is in Chicago for the war games, an important element in the social life of the Midwest during the summer.

Washington friends have been numbered in the house parties Maj. and Mrs. Winslow have been giving in their quaint Georgian home in Millbrook.

The Winslows are looking forward to an interesting winter, for Maj. Winslow is scheduled to attend the army maneuvers in five countries—Russia, Poland, Rumania, Latvia and Estonia. Mrs. Winslow will accompany him on most of these journeys.

The Naval Attache of the British Embassy, Capt. F. C. Bradley, and Mrs. Bradley, have been having a gay time in San Francisco, according to letters received by their friends here. They were, of course, prominent in the festivities welcoming Admiral, the Hon. Sir Matthew R. Best, commander-in-chief of the American and West Indies stations of His Majesty's Navy. Admiral Best came to the Golden Gate city on his flagship, H. M. S. Appolo, en route to Victoria, B. C.

Capt. and Mrs. Bradley gave a dinner for the British admiral, which was one of the highlights of the visit.

Comtesse Andre de Limur, who, as Miss Ethel Crocker, of San Francisco, came frequently to Washington for several seasons, is again in this country, but will sail shortly for Paris, where she will entertain at a series of house parties at her home between Passy and Auteuil on the Rue Berton.

The home is one of the most beautiful examples of an eighteenth century Parisian mansion. Through the wish of the Comtesse de Limur to preserve its historic interest it has resisted the advance of modern building in that section.

The marriage of Miss Crocker some years ago to Comte Andre de Limur, attache of the French Embassy in London who also had been attached to the Washington embassy of his country, was a social event of international interest.

Senorita Campbell To Be Wed Aug. 8 To Mr. Butendiek

The wedding of Senorita Eliana Campbell, daughter of the Commercial Attache of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell, to Senor Helmuth Butendiek, son of Senor Edmond Butendiek, of Chile, will take place August 8 at her grandmother's home in Santiago.

Senorita Campbell left Washington this spring for Chile and rumors have forecast her wedding date in every month since her sailing. The date now is definitely set for a week from Saturday.

Bridal Shower Given For Miss Dorothy Reed

Miss Dorothy Reed was given a surprise bridal shower last night at her home, 1400 Orren street. Prior to her wedding to Mr. Mark E. Cawood, which will take place August 8 at 2 p. m. at Holy Name Church.

The house was decorated with garden flowers, wedding bells and a huge umbrella with 17 gifts attached. Seventy-five guests were present.

Erlebacher Washington, D.C.

Miss Bassford, Of Bronxville, Is Betrothed

Of interest to Washington is the engagement of Miss Florence Winmill Bassford, of Bronxville, N. Y., to Mr. James F. Phelps, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernan A. Phelps, of Buzzards Bay, Mass. Miss Bassford is the daughter of Mrs. F. W. Bassford, of Bronxville, who announced the engagement, and a niece of Mr. Robert Winmill, of Millneck, Long Island, and Warrenton, Va.

She was graduated from Ashley Hall, Charleston, S. C., and traveled abroad for a year before attending the Eversholme School, Florence, Italy. She is manager of the Bronxville Tennis Club.

Mr. Phelps, who is with William A. White & Sons, New York, is a descendant of Roger Williams. The bride-to-be is a descendant of Alexander Spotiswood, first colonial Governor of Virginia, and of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Miss Brico Has Two N. Y. Guests

Mrs. Openhym and Mrs. Page Visiting Woman Conductor Here.

Mrs. George Openhym, of Hartsdale, N. Y., and Mrs. Frances Page, of New York, are here to spend today and tomorrow with Miss Antonia Brico, who tonight is conducting the final concert of a series of three under her baton at the Watergate.

Mrs. Openhym is secretary of the Women's Symphony Orchestra in New York, of which Miss Brico is organizer and conductor, and Mrs. Page is one of its patronesses.

They will be among the guests at a picnic to be given tomorrow in Rock Creek by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Packer in honor of Miss Brico. Mr. Packer is assistant chief of the Eastern European Division of the State Department.

Miss Rice Hostess To Bar Members

Her guests included Miss Mary Agnes Brown, Miss E. Louise Chandler, Miss Catherine Dolan, Miss Helen Dolan, Miss Zelda Dove, Miss Elizabeth Franzoni, Miss Helen Newman, Judge Ellen K. Raedy, Mrs. Florence Richardson, Miss Janet Rutter and Miss Catherine M. Stafford. All are members of the District of Columbia Bar and plan to attend the convention of the American Bar Association to be held in Boston August 24.

Miss Mary Agnes Brown and Miss Elizabeth Franzoni will entertain at the sundown supper to be given by the junior section of the Women's Bar Association next Thursday aboard the City of Washington. Approximately 100 invitations have been issued.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl's Fiance, Having Taken Job in Another City, Now Is Cold to Her; Scarcely Speaks; She Asks Why.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a boy nearly three years and we are engaged to be married. I love him very much, but here is the trouble: he went to another city to work and asked me to be true to him until he had saved enough money for us to be married. I have not gone with any other boys during his absence and do not expect to go with anyone else, because I could never love another as I love him.

* * * *

He has been away five months now, coming back on visits every two weeks, but he acts so indifferent toward me, almost as though he doesn't even wish to talk to me. I have been wondering if any of his friends have been telling him untruths about me, maybe causing him to think I have been going out with other boys while he has been away. He had promised to get a car and come to see me oftener and stay longer; as it is now, he comes with a friend and stays hardly any time at all.

* * * *

Recently I tried to give back the engagement ring, but he refused to accept it. He said he liked me and wanted me to keep the ring, and yet I don't feel like wearing it when he is so indifferent toward me. Why do you suppose he insists on my keeping the ring, when he no longer seems to love me? And do you think it is right of him to listen to untruths about me?

I have been so hurt by his attitude that I sometimes think I can never be happy again. Should I keep his ring? Do you think he really does like me? How do you explain his coldness? Please advise me. I thank you. Yours very truly, E. F. B.

* * * *

DEAR E. F. B.: It is my guess that the boy has become interested in some other girl, so that he is no longer sure in his own mind that he wishes to marry you. As a matter of fact, he may be quite sure he doesn't wish to marry you, but he may not have the courage to admit the truth. It is probably a guilty realization that he has broken faith with you that makes him moody and silent, cold and unresponsive, when in your company. He may be hoping that his indifference will finally drive you to break off the engagement so that he will be spared the necessity of shouldering full responsibility for the deed.

* * * *

It is just barely possible, of course, that he is in a state of uncertainty where he can't make up his mind between you and another girl whom he has met in the new environment, and that he wishes you to keep the ring and to go on with the engagement until he has finally decided just what he wishes to do.

* * * *

I hardly think his changed attitude is due to gossip about your having played him false. If such was the case, I believe he would have made some accusation in this regard and would have asked you to give him back the ring. It is my opinion that a girl of proper pride and high spirit would mail him back his ring, without further discussion of the matter, in view of his most unloverlike conduct. If he cares for you at all, the possibility of your haping the courage to throw him over will rekindle his erstwhile devotion. If he doesn't care for you enough to fight for your love, you might as well have done with him now as later.

* * * *

He is probably telling the truth when he says he "likes" you; but there is a great deal of difference betwen liking and a love which makes for marriage. When he says he likes you, he probably means he has nothing particularly against you, but that he no longer can conscientiously say he loves you. Absence, you know, has a way of snuffing out a little love, and of kindling a great love into a more intense flame.

* * * *

If you feel you must go into the whys and wherefores of the situation, instead of wisely accepting it, I would suggest you stop trying to put your finger on false reports about yourself, and devote yourself to learning who the other woman is. For I am convinced the whole situation has developed out of his meeting another girl. M. H.

Would Send Mother Away.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My mother has been self-supporting many of her years, and at the same time helped her less fortunate children financially, which meant a struggle more or less. The depression period, too, was very hard, as I believe she lost most of her meager savings. She is now entering her seventieth year, is unemployed and finds it very hard to get work because of her age. She has no one to depend upon for support, as her children have large families, and are struggling with financial difficulties of their own. She has expressed a desire to enter an old ladies' home. I must get her settled soon, as her savings have just about given out. Will you kindly let me know how I can go about getting her placed in such a home? Whom should I go to see?
Respectfully yours, V. H.

* * * *

DEAR V. H.: Miss Anna Herdina, case worker who handles old folks' problems for the District Board of Public Welfare, can probably give you the information you need. Her office is located at 901 Eighth street northwest. I must confess myself rather shocked at the callousness of a family of children, however hard-pressed financially, who would make a public ward of a mother whose money, when she had any, was generously spent on them. Surely some other plan can be made for her. Think it over, and ask Miss Herdina's advice. M. H.

Painted Velvets Shown for Fall

Paris (AP).—Painted velvets, chenille plaided crepes, gem studded satins, and gold, silver, copper shot stuffs, all in the modern manner, promises to dramatize autumn clothes into a super-style show.

Figured fabrics steal the glory from plain weaves. Where simple motifs fail, stripes come to the fore. They trek lengthwise or crosswise with equal ease but in fancy regalia. Silver stripes, for instance, tie themselves into bowknots at intervals, and small figures may link arms the whole width of the material, to form another kind of stripe.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"MY LITTLE freckled faced boy is a darling and means the best in the world, but the way he bangs up our house is a caution to "snakes," confided one of the other mothers at a birthday party given in our neighborhood.

"And he brings home the worst conglomeration of junk! I've found live frogs among the cushions on the sofa and bird eggs carefully put away—and forgotten—in my jewelry box. What's the use nagging him . . . he's got to get those things out of his system one place or another, and I'm glad he feels free around the house.

"Of course it's that kind of a house. Slightly in need of a coat of paint on the outside and a bit frayed inside. But I love the old place and my husband always insists that replacements be just the same as the old things.

"The funniest thing happened . . . I dyed some glass curtains for our living room and dining room. I mixed several shades of dye till I got the most delicious deep peachy apricot tone. They did look sunny and pleasant at the windows and we used them for years till they simply fell apart. Well, my husband decided to surprise me with some new curtains, so he snipped a piece of the old ones and hunted the town over trying to match the color exactly. He was so disappointed when he finally gave up and came to me about it. I said I'd enjoy a change of color anyway, but that struck him as rank traitorism to our home. We compromised on some material that's almost the same as the first ones I dyed, but he still looks at them sadly because they're not exactly like the others. He's so sentimental"

But you could tell she was as pleased as punch that she and the home she'd made were appreciated that way. Any woman would be.

Wise Parent Spares Child Open Reproof

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

A VERY little child may not feel ashamed at being corrected in the presence of strangers. As he grows older, however, he resents publicity more and more, until correction in the presence of any third person seems to him an insufferable invasion of privacy.

By the time he is in his teens discipline and reproof, if necessary, must be administered with the greatest tact and in utter secrecy.

Obedience as it is known in childhood, blind acquiescence in what one is told to do, is not obtainable when a child reaches his teens, nor should it be. When a child can reason, he should be talked to as an equal, not as a half-wit. Parents often forget this, and consequently are startled at the resentment and rebelliousness which their orders rouse.

When they add insult to injury and treat the boy or girl like a little child in public, there is no knowing to what lengths the youngster's indignation will lead. Much juvenile delinquency, many cases of running away, result from such ill-advised misuse of authority.

A little child is helpless. He must do as he is told whether he likes it or not. Many adults take advantage of his helplessness to impose their will on him, often humiliating him and injuring his dignity—the one thing which should be his. As he grows older and stronger, he is apt as a consequence of this treatment to develop a sense of injury, and to resent any corrections or reproof.

The wise parent will take hands off at once and as far as possible give the child his head. In any event, he will do what he can to build up the child's dignity and sense of independence. Never, under any circumstances, will he let the child down by correcting him in the presence, or even in the hearing, of a third person.

Help Problem Being Solved For Housewife

Home Training, Betterment of Employment Goal of WPA Schools.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHEN LADIES MEET, their conversation sooner or later invarably drifts around to the "help" problem.

"My maid sweeps the middle of the floor and skimps the corners," complains one. "If I could only find a girl who didn't need constant watching . . ."

"My cook prepares delicious meals, but she never sets the table right and she knows next to nothing about serving," adds another. "I'd give anything to find a trained woman . . ."

"So would I," agrees another. "Bobby's nurse never had any experience before she came to me, and while she looks after him fairly well, she has never learned how to keep herself neat . . ."

The Other Side.

At the same time, chances are the person being discussed is discussing her mistress as follows:

"She expects me to do all the laundry, cleaning, cooking, serving and caring for the children for $5 a week. I have to be there at 7 and stay until all hours. Never have any time of my own . . . If I could only find out what she expects of me. She never tells me how she wants anything done, but whatever I do is wrong."

So it goes. Mistresses are dissatisfied with maids; maids, with mistresses. Countless young women are on relief rolls and countless housewives wonder where on earth they can find competent persons. Is there any solution? Is there any way to bring available jobs and workers together?

"That is exactly what we're trying to do now," Miss Anna Marie Driscoll said yesterday. As national supervisor of the WPA project that is training thousands of young women as household workers, she believes "We have found the ideal way to solve the servant problem and, to some extent, the unemployment problem. It lies in creating qualified labor to meet the existing demand for competent domestic employes.

Thousands Lack Training.

"Relief rolls contain thousands of women who are unable to hold household jobs because of lack of training and experience. Our three-point program is designed to correct this and also to raise permanently, if possible, standards in servant employment."

While some effort has been made to train women in certain localities, the WPA project is the first Nationwide program along this line. Functioning since February of this year, the work has been initiated in 17 States, New York City and the District of Columbia, through an allotment of $500,000 for Federal funds administered by the women's division of the WPA.

Instruction is being offered in demonstration centers which parallel as closely as possible those which face the average American housewife in her daily routine. In Washington are two centers for training domestics. White girls are given instruction at the Y. W. C. A.; colored girls, at 1114 O street northwest. Both schools are under the direction of Mrs. Ella Putnam, supervisor of this work for the District.

During their apprenticeship the girls receive their lunches, their uniforms (made by persons on relief rolls) and a dollar a week for car fare. "All girls are volunteers, in an age group ranging from 18 to 35," said Miss Driscoll. "Each applicant can choose the type of training she wants, or she may take all four courses offered. These will equip her to be a general household employe, cook, nurse maid or 'second maid.'

"At the end of the eight-week course (which a girl with special aptitude might complete in four weeks) the trainee receives a certificate of proficiency. Care in personal appearance and cleanliness, health examination, the answering of doorbell and telephone, and the reception of guests are points to be stressed before the completion of the course, which also includes training in the technique of cleaning, bedmaking, cooking, serving, laundering, child-feeding, marketing and the proper handling of such equipment as vacuum cleaners, modern refrigerators and gas and electric stoves."

Yet the task Miss Driscoll and her assistants face is not finished when young women on relief rolls are thoroughly trained for household work. "Our next step is to try, through employment agencies, to find satisfactory places for each trainee," she said. "Generally, this is not difficult, since both public and private agencies can attest the fact that there are more available jobs for trained workers than there are women to fill them."

Shortage Since 1921.

Turning her attention from the maid to the mistress, Miss Driscoll pointed out that in many cases the later has been responsible for the present widespread aversion to household work. "There has been a shortage in skilled domestic labor since 1921, when the first quota law cut off a large supply of Europeans. Comparatively few American-born girls have entered this field. Employers can do much to make domestic service more attractive to competent workers."

Much misunderstanding between servants and their mistresses could be corrected, Miss Driscoll believes, if the average housewife would:

1. Treat her hired help with the courtesy due to any human being.

2. Set regular hours for her servants, so that they can have some time at their own disposal. ("The long and irregular hours in domestic service cause many young women to seek other fields of occupation," said Miss Driscoll.)

3. Provide comfortable living quarters for servants. A maid who has to sleep on a lumpy bed or a room without proper ventilation cannot be expected to have the proper attitude toward her work.

4. Pay her employes in proportion to the service they render. If she expects one servant to do the work of three, the salary should be higher. An underpaid domestic is rarely satisfactory.

"Until hours, wages and working conditions are made comparable with those in other occupations, young women won't go into household service with any enthusiasm," Miss Driscoll declared. "It is apparent from studies made by the Government and other interested agencies that until definite steps have been made to improve current conditions for domestics and current attitudes toward them, young women will continue to choose factory, mill or other work in preference to household employment."

Helps Solve Servant Problem

MISS ANNA MARIE DRISCOLL, supervisor of the WPA project to train household workers, points out that there are more available jobs for competent domestics than there are women to fill them.

Mrs. Child Turns Democrat, to Tour

A one-time stanch Republican, Mrs. Eva Sanderson Child, former wife of the late Richard Washburn Child, has recently turned Democrat and has joined the volunteer speakers bureau organized by Miss Molly Dewson, chairman of the women's division of the Democratic national committee.

Before her divorce from the late Mr. Child, who was Ambassador to Italy under the Harding and Coolidge administrations, Mr. Child collaborated with him on many political articles attacking Democratic policies and upholding Republican administratoins. Mrs. Child, now as ardent a Democrat as she was a Republican, will tour the country, making campaign speeches for Roosevelt. She is at her home in Plainfield, Mass.

BLUEBERRY PUDDING

2 cups blueberries
½ cup water
2 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca
2-3 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1½ cups sifted cake flour
1½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons butter or other shortening
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup milk
½ teaspoon vanilla

Bring to a boil blueberries and water. Combine tapioca, sugar and salt; add gradually to fruit mixture and boil briskly 1 minute. Add butter and lemon juice; pour into greased 7½-inch casserole or 8x8x2-inch pan.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cream butter, add sugar gradually, and cream together well. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Turn out over tapioca-fruit mixture. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 1 hour, or until cake is baked. Serve hot. Serves 8 to 10.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

New Bath Powder Comes In Generous Boxes And Inexpensive

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, endorse or manufacture any cosmetics).

By Mignon.

CERTAINLY in these days no one can complain if he gets a large portion of a fine bath powder for the price of the original and smaller box. I have found for you a lily of the valley powder of excellent texture. It comes in a very generous box for a very small price, and I would call that a good day's work.

There are lilies of the valley and lilies of the valley. This is the second one, or what you might call the last word. The fragrance is not sickeningly sweet as many lily fragrances are, but it is delicate and lovely and the scent lasts just about as long as you would want it to.

There are very many people who like one kind of bath powder and another fragrance in perfume, and if your bath powder is offensively strong it certainly interferes disastrously with a fine perfume you might want to use later in the day.

In case you are interested, the same company makes a cologne and bath salts of the same lily of the valley, so if you are lily conscious, here is your great opportunity. So many things that are inexpensive are not good, but this is one you need not be afraid of.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

There is a parasitic worm called the trichinella spiralis which may exist in its youthful state in the muscles of some swine. If infested pork that has been insufficiently cooked is eaten the worms will find their way into the human stomach. The young worms develop in the intestine within 2 or 3 days, and the females then burrow through the bowel wall. Many will lodge in the lymphatic vessels and within another few days give birth to their young. Their prolific progeny migrate through the lymph channels, finally reaching the general circulation, and thence are distributed to the tissues and organs of the body. They endeavor to reach muscles and when they succeed each will curl up into a tiny ball, which nature attempts to surround with a protective envelope or sheath. Sometimes the body will inclose them with deposits of lime and thus place the invaders in a prison-like cell.

Reaction Varies.

If one has eaten poorly cooked pork containing trichina there is sometimes a quick reaction to the toxins produced by the worms. The patient will usually complain of nausea and vomiting, accompanied by severe abdominal cramps and diarrhea. On the other hand, there may be no immedite effect. In such cases, all interval of from 6 to 14 days will elapse during which the patient is free from symptoms. As soon as the blood stream is invaded however, headache and general muscle pains will appear. There is a characteristic swelling of the eyelids and hemorrhages may occur under the skin. Muscle stiffness and tenderness are particularly noted in children. Many victims will show definite signs of heart weakness, a rather severe form of bronchitis, and occasionally extreme restlessness.

The fever varies in intensity with the number of parasites absorbed and may continue for from a few days to six weeks or longer.

In May of this year a woman aged 26, while visiting friends in the country, consumed homemade sausage. A week later she complained of pain in her knees, but as the symptoms were not severe little attention was paid to the discomfort. A month later, however, she became worse. The knees were swollen and tender and the eyelids markedly puffy. At this time a blood count was made and the peculiar white cells—eosinophils—typical of pork worm disease, were found in great abundance. Her temperature continued for several weeks. In fact, she is still convalescing.

No Known Antiseptic.

The possibility of trichina should be thought of more often than it is. Any fever that is accompanied by swelling of the eyelids and pain in the muscles on movement means that a careful count of the white cells should be made and if eosinophils are found in large numbers pork worm infestation is probable.

Treatment consists of rest in bed, plenty of fluids and good nourishment. It is well at the outset to give a thorough purge, as many of the parasites will thus be swept out of the intestine. There is no known antiseptic that will kill the worms once they have invaded the blood stream, although some day, perhaps, an antitoxin will be discovered.

Rich Colors Back For Decorations

Chinese wallpaper panels in red and gold are used effectively against wooden or plastered walls, the wood and plaster effects also being achieved by wallpaper.

'Miss America' Contest Lures Many Beauties

40 Already Entered, With List Mounting Rapidly Each Day.

By Chanticleer.

Pity the poor judges at Chevy Chase Lake Tuesday night. Forty little bundles of pulchritude already have signed for the annual competition through which is selected the District's entrant in Atlantic City's "Miss America" contest. And more entrants are being recorded daily. In fact the candidates may enroll as late as the evening of the preliminary judging.

It was in 1921 that the District captured its last national honors. The winner then was Margaret Gorman. But even though the local winner loses in the finals, against the cream of selections from every State, she gets a grand week at Atlantic City with all expenses paid.

The judges will be headed by Gene Ford, stage director at the Fox Theater, and include the drama critics of the newspapers, Dorsey Doniphan, artist, and Emile Beauvais, beautician.

Artie Humes, youthful trumpet player with Pete Macias and his orchestra, is the most energetic musician in town. While the other members of the band are amusing themselves with long stories between dance groups, Hume is diligently applying himself to a new arrangement of a tune. His latest contribution is something special—a typical Humes arrangement of "Alice Blue Gown."

Frank McNey, for many years a smiling figure in the lives of those who seek their diversion after dark, is personally directing the activities of Griffith Farms. And it is his intention from this day on to provide Washingtonians all the joys of night life.

Mammy Jenny is stopping the show these nights at the Cocoanut Grove. In costume, she does an Aunt Jemima act. Bennett Green and Gina and Giano (now in their week of ballroom steps) in support.

Milton Davis is back at the piano, with Matt Windsor's orchestra at the Russian Roof, after a real experience in fishing. And the fish didn't get away, either.

Stone Villa opens under new management Saturday night. Hugh Garvin takes charge, and presents as guest entertainers Jed Lewis and his Addis Ababa band. Lewis has been with Fats Waller.

Police Order Arrest of 4 In Shooting

Roundup of four members of the "Foggy Bottom" Warring gang for investigation into the "racket" shooting of Joseph Edward O'Brien was ordered yesterday by Chief of Detectives Bernard W. Thompson.

Although Thompson refused to comment other than to say the men will be questioned in the shooting, the drive is thought to be an effort to rid Washington of this last well organized gang of "pre-repeal" bootleggers and "numbers" racketeers.

One of the men ordered arrested is Charles (Rags) Warring, one of four brothers said by police to be the leaders of this gang who attempted to kill O'Brien while he was standing in front of a lunchroom in the 200 block, Second street southeast, July 21.

Shot Three Times.

O'Brien, described by police as a "small-time bootlegger," was shot three times in the legs, reputedly for attempting to expand his trade in illicit liquor from the Southeast to the Northwest section, which is ruled by the Warrings.

Others ordered arrested in the blanket lookout are John Sweeney, 19; Vernon (Legs) Tate, 25, and Clarence (Cocky) Ware, 32. The men are said to frequent the vicinity of Twenty-fifth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Plain-clothes men from the Detective Bureau working under cover searched the haunts of the gang yesterday and last night without success. Charles Warring is said to be out of town.

Three men already have been charged with assault with intent to kill in the shooting. They were freed on $10,000 bond each after they pleaded not guilty. The men are Samuel (Monty) Montgomery, George F. Tear, brother of Richard Tear, fiance of the slain Corinna Loring, and Samuel Bond.

Four Released.

Three other men and a woman arrested shortly after the shooting were questioned and released without bond to appear at the trial as Government witnesses.

It was intimated at police headquarters the investigation may go further into the rackets allegedly operated by these men than questioning regarding the shooting.

Police said there is a possibility the arrests will lead to a showdown between the department and the district attorney's office.

Several police officials have been overheard condemning prosecutors for failures to convict these men after they are brought to trial with evidence, which the policemen believe conclusive enough for conviction.

No New Paralysis Cases in District

No infantile paralysis has been reported in the District and ten States since June 13, the United States Health Service revealed yesterday when it announced that 512 cases had been reported in 38 States since that date.

Alabama led the list with 209, and Tennessee was second with 60; California had 52, Illinois, 27; New York, 24, and Mississippi, 15. Several States had only one case.

There were 117 new cases last week, 2 less than during the preceding week. Alabama reported 39 new cases, compared to 35 in the previous week.

Four Marine Reservists Are Given Higher Ranks

Headquarters of the Marine Corps yesterday announced issuance of commissions as first lieutenants, Fleet Marine Corps Reserve, to former Second Lieuts. James A. Hennessy, Earl E. Holmes, Robert E. Copes and William R. Via.

The four officers are attached to the Fifth Battalion, Fleet Marine Corps Reserve. All formerly were enlisted men. Lieut. Hennessy was educated at Georgetown University; Lieuts. Holmes and Copes at George Washington, and Lieut. Via at Virginia Military Institute.

Actress Wins Divorce From Federal Employe

Los Angeles, July 29 (AP).—Pauline Ratay, brunette actress, today testified her husband, Vlad Ratay, "knocked me down with my baby in my arms."

The actress, who appeared in "Tobacco Road," on cross-country tour, was granted a divorce and custody of her 6-year-old son. Superior Judge Charles L. Bogus ordered Ratay, Federal employe in Washington, to pay $100 a month alimony and support the child.

Press Called 100% Behind Merit System

Press opinion stands 100 per cent behind the merit system as opposed to patronage appointments in the Federal service, according to a cross-section of editorial comment from representative newspapers included in the new book "Spoils," which is being published here August 15 by William Ullman.

All party lines are broken by newspapers in their support of the merit system and denunciation of spoilsmanship, according to Herbert S. Hollander, Washington newspaperman and author of the book.

Business Just the Same During Alterations

Looking down Fourteenth street from above New York avenue during morning rush hour. The double tracks between New York avenue and H street are gone.

Trolley Almost Meets Schedule In Rush Hour, Reporter Finds

Car Travels From Columbia Road to Fourteenth Street and New York Avenue in 16 Minutes; Few Have to Stand in Lieu of Seats.

In an effort to determine the justice of complaints that street car travel is slower since the new downtown routing, The Washington Post assigned a reporter to ride the trolleys during the morning rush period yesterday. Her story follows:

By Virginia Lee Warren.

As the rush hour approached its peak—at 8:15 a. m., to be exact—we rushed into a Bureau of Engraving car in our best flying-wedge manner, ready to fight for a strap to hang onto or a foot to stand on. We boarded the car at Columbia road and Fourteenth street. To our surprise, and almost to our disgust, since we had been led to expect a seething mob, there actually were vacant seats.

Exactly 16 minutes after getting on at Columbia road we got off at Fourteenth street and New York avenue. Not bad? Pretty good, even the Capital Transit Co. admitted when informed of our research. Sixteen minutes is very little above the normal time required for the run; that means when conditions are normal and not when a bevy of workmen are mingled among the tracks between H and G streets, as they are now.

Thinking we had miscalculated the so-called rush hour and that our quick, comfortable ride had been a fluke, we tried it again. This time things moved a little slower. The rush hour had reached its climax but we wouldn't have known it if the conductor hadn't said so; only a handful of persons had to stand.

13 Minutes.

It took the car, bound for the Navy Yard, just 13 minutes, from 8:43 to 8:55, to come from Rhode Island avenue to the same New York avenue stop on Fourteenth street. The Capital Transit Co. had the grace to be apologetic over that figure. The normal time required for the run is 7 minutes.

Determined to get to the bottom of this street-car riding business we tried it again. But the peak of the rush had passed and it took a Bureau of Engraving car only 9 minutes to make it from Rhode Island avenue to Pennsylvania avenue. And there were a couple of seats to spare all the way.

What about persons having to leave the car several blocks from their destination and walking so they won't be late to work? There's no blinking the fact that the trolleys are slowed up by workmen making the shift in tracks between H and G streets. Yesterday morning they were lined up for a couple of blocks so that they looked like an excursion train. But they never were stalled for more than a few seconds.

One woman, plainly tired of the whole business, got off midway between H and I streets. But a little questioning developed that she works on H street and was getting off only a few yards above her regular stop.

Woman Disgruntled.

She was slightly disgruntled though. She said for the last few days the car has dumped her in the middle of the street instead of unloading her in a safety zone and that she fears she will be run down by an automobile some morning.

But the disgruntled woman was an exception. Most of the passengers took the small delays good-naturedly and some of them even made a game of watching the cars routed onto Fourteenth street from H. At this point is the greatest congestion. The cars from Mount Pleasant and those coming down Fourteenth street must make turns with the Fourteenth street track.

"I'll bet anything they let that Mount Pleasant car go ahead of us," said a girl in a bright print dress to her companion on a Bureau of Engraving car.

"I'll bet they don't," said the other girl. "It's our turn. If they let that other car go first it isn't fair."

At that moment the dispatcher signalled the Bureau of Engraving car to come ahead. As it proceeded down Fourteenth street the passengers snooted those on the Mount Pleasant car in the manner of a yacht winning an international race.

Invite Inspection

Capital Transit Co. officials yesterday invited the Public Utilities Commission to inspect its new bus garage at Half and M streets southeast tomorrow.

Built at a total cost of $280,000, the garage has the latest devices, including a washing machine, bus hoists, and a pump that will fill up the large buses at the rate of 32 gallons per minute or 128 gallons in four buses.

Commission and transit officials believe that the garage will insure more dependable service next winter when snow and ice cover the streets and the temperature falls below zero. The garage has a capacity for 105 buses.

The mechanical washing machine is something new, according to the transit company, and will give the large motor carriers a complete bath in 6½ minutes.

Buses, with all windows closed, will travel between two sets of brushes spouting water. The spray will be controlled by electric eyes which cross the path of the vehicle.

When this garage goes in service on Sunday the Capital Transit Co. will have storage capacity for 450 buses. Its fleet now numbers 485.

Since December, 1933, the company has purchased 257 buses at a cost of $2,373,000.

Union Ousts 8 Who Returned To Garage Jobs

Motor Firm Reports All Strikers Back at Work Under New Plan.

Oliver N. Garrison, business agent of the Auto Mechanics Union, announced at a lodge meeting last night that eight men who returned to work at Mandell's Garage yesterday had been automatically dropped from union membership.

Harry Rosenthal, vice president and treasurer of the Mandell Chevrolet Co., Thirteenth street and Good Hope road southeast, said last night that 14 men had returned to work. He said this number was all that had gone out on strike.

According to Garrison, 23 men had left their jobs when the strike was called. He said that to his knowledge only eight returned yesterday.

Garrison explained that the men were dropped from the union because they had returned to work without the sanction of strike leaders. The strikers will continue to picket the Mandell shop, he added.

The men who returned to the Mandell shop are the second group to go back to work since the strike was called. On Tuesday 13 mechanics returned to the Ourisman Chevrolet Sales Co., 610 H street northeast. These likewise were suspended from the union.

Rosenthal said that the men who went back to work yesterday will receive 35 per cent of the customer's dollar, instead of the 33 1-3 formerly paid. The men can work as many hours a week as they wish, Rosenthal said, and an arrangement has been made to advance them money on their salaries.

Boy Scouts and Cab Drivers Aid In Search for Vanished Hacker

The police yesterday redoubled their efforts to find Charles L. Miller, 44-year-old cab driver and former contractor, who has been missing since Tuesday. Assisting the police were a troop of Boy Scouts and 25 cab drivers, mates of the missing man.

Miller was last seen about 8:30 p. m., Tuesday, when he lunched at a delicatessen at Fourth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast. Two hours later four colored men were seen to jump from his cab at Tenth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast, witnesses have told the police. The cab was found abandoned there the next morning.

The homicide squad, under Detective Sergt. George Darnell, spent yesterday tracing Miller's actions from the time he went to work until he was last seen.

Directed by J. O. Patton, the public relations squad checked on the past life of Miller, a World War veteran and once a wealthy contractor.

All available patrolmen from the Twelfth Precinct were ordered to aid the search. With them were 12 detectives. Directed by Lieut. F. H. McGinnis, these men were combing the woods near Catholic University on the theory that Miller might have been either killed or injured and left in the woods. In all, 58 persons were engaged in the search last night.

U. S. to Seek 3d Indictment In Spy Case

Blanket Accusation May Be Filed Against Farnsworth.

Dismissed Navy Officer Pleads Not Guilty to Espionage.

An additional indictment charging conspiracy to betray United States naval secrets will be sought against former Lieut. Comdr. John Semer Farnsworth, already indicted on two "spy" counts, it was learned yesterday.

The fresh indictment against the former officer, who was court-martialed out of the Navy nine years ago, will serve as a blanket accusation supplementing the two specific counts in the District grand jury's indictment, first, that Farnsworth sold a copy of "Service of Information and Security," 1922, a confidential manual of tactics, to an agent of the Japanese government, and, second, that he attempted to sell the manual.

Freshened by his two weeks' stay in the District Jail and apparently in improved health, the 43-year-old former officer pleaded not guilty to both charges in District Court yesterday before Justice Oscar R. Luhring. Farnsworth's attorneys, William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes, were granted ten days in which to study the indictment and file an answer.

Farnsworth was clad in the same, neatly pressed, black, pin-stripe suit that he wore when he was first arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, almost two weeks ago.

After yesterday's arraignment he was returned to the District Jail. His attorneys said they "probably" would not attempt to raise the $10,000 bail in which he is being held.

The additional indictment, it is understood, will be based on the charge that in the spring of 1934 Farnsworth obtained the loan of several confidential pamphlets which were part of a Naval War College correspondence course for naval officers, from Lieut. William S. Pye, an instructor in seamanship at the Naval Academy.

After several days, Farnsworth returned the pamphlets at the request of Lieut Pye, who later informed Naval Intelligence officers of the incident. Pye explained that he was not aware that Farnsworth had been court-martialed, the former naval officer representing himself as having resigned from the service.

The decision to move for a blanket conspiracy indictment is believed to have been taken to strengthen the Government's legal case. The maximum penalty Farnsworth faces is 20 years.

Although Farnsworth has admitted giving a batch of Navy photographs to an agent of the Japanese and having received $1,000 from the Japanese for writing two monographs on the naval disarmament conference and on naval aviation, he has consistently maintained that all this information "could have been gotten in the public library."

Police Promotion Transfers Listed

Formal announcement of the transfers of recently promoted members of the Police Department was made yesterday by Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown.

Those promoted and their new stations are: Lieut. Lloyd E. Kelly, promoted to rank of captain and transferred from the Eleventh to the Eighth Precinct; Lieut. Rhoda Millikin, promoted to the rank of captain and to remain as director of the Woman's Bureau.

Sergt. Walter T. Storm, promoted to rank of lieutenant to remain at the Traffic Division; Sergt. Archie M. Winfree, promoted to rank of lieutenant and transferred from the Eighth to the Eleventh Precinct.

Private Charles S. Dwyer, promoted to the rank of sergeant and transferred from the Seventh to the First Precinct; Private Paul Sullivan, promoted to the rank of sergeant and transferred from Traffic Division to the Second Precinct; Private Thomas E. Edwards, promoted to rank of sergeant and transferred from the Traffic Division to Eighth Precinct; Private Veronica Devlin, promoted to rank of sergeant to remain at the Woman's Bureau.

Playground Baby Show Winners

Girl Awarded Auto, Boy a Doll, But, Withal, Show Is Success

30 Youngsters, Ranging in Age From 1 to 6, Parade in Annual Event at Janney Playground; Prizes Awarded in 5 Groups.

This is a topsy-turvy age, an age of upsets, as political experts and historians agree, even in that pink-and-blue, bauble-bedecked realm known as Babyland.

For instance, 30 youngsters, ranging in age from 1 year to 6, were garbed in their fanciest frills and taken by their proud mamas to the Janney Playground, at Wisconsin avenue and Albemarle street, where the annual baby show was being held.

Every participant got a lollypop—a lemon, or orange, or chocolate or strawberry lollypop—to make the day seem sweeter.

And then each prize winner in the five age groups received a toy.

What was the chagrin of 2-year-old Joseph Pellegrino to discover his award was a round-faced doll, clad in a snow helmet, with pudgy cheeks and stocky legs?

And what was the amazement of Barbara Lee Hidey, just turned 21 months, to find her prize was a minature automobile, with rubber wheels and a pigmy chassis?

"I'll swap," offered Joe, when the two champions met after the stress of competition.

Barbara frowned cautiously, then pursed her lips.

"No," she murmured, and then added something that sounded like: "This is the day of the automobile, and I think I'll find out all about automobiles and what makes them run and what makes automobiles make funny sounds like they do, because I'm going to have a big one of my own some day if my dreams come true."

Judges in the show were Mrs. Miner Buell, Mrs. Sterling Parks and Mrs. Joseph Gray.

It all ended happily, with much munching, and the babies agreed that the day had turned out to be a "lulu."

Or was it a "lolly?"

Midsummer Lawn Fete To Be Held at Y.W.C.A.

Carl R. Loveridge, 29, taxicab driver, was sentenced to 30 years in prison for the jealous slaying of his sweetheart on his plea of guilty to second-degree murder before Justice Oscar R. Luhring in District Court yesterday.

On the night of April 30 the girl arrived at her home at 244 Ninth street southeast with Howard A. Brooks. Loveridge was waiting in his taxi in front of the house.

James Rossier, the girl's stepfather, was a witness of the tragedy. He said he was standing inside the house near the front door when he heard Jessie say:

"Carl, please don't do it."

Jessie was running toward the house. Her stepfather heard her scream: "Mother." A second later a shot rang out. She died in Casualty Hospital a short time afterward.

An hour after the shooting, the police arrested Loveridge, who lived in the 1200 block N street northwest, in Anacostia. Two days later they announced Loveridge had made a detailed confession.

Loveridge took the sentence calmly. He was indicted for first-degree murder carrying the death penalty, but because the crime was committed in the heat of jealous passion, he was permitted to plead to the lesser offense. He will be eligible for parole in 20 years.

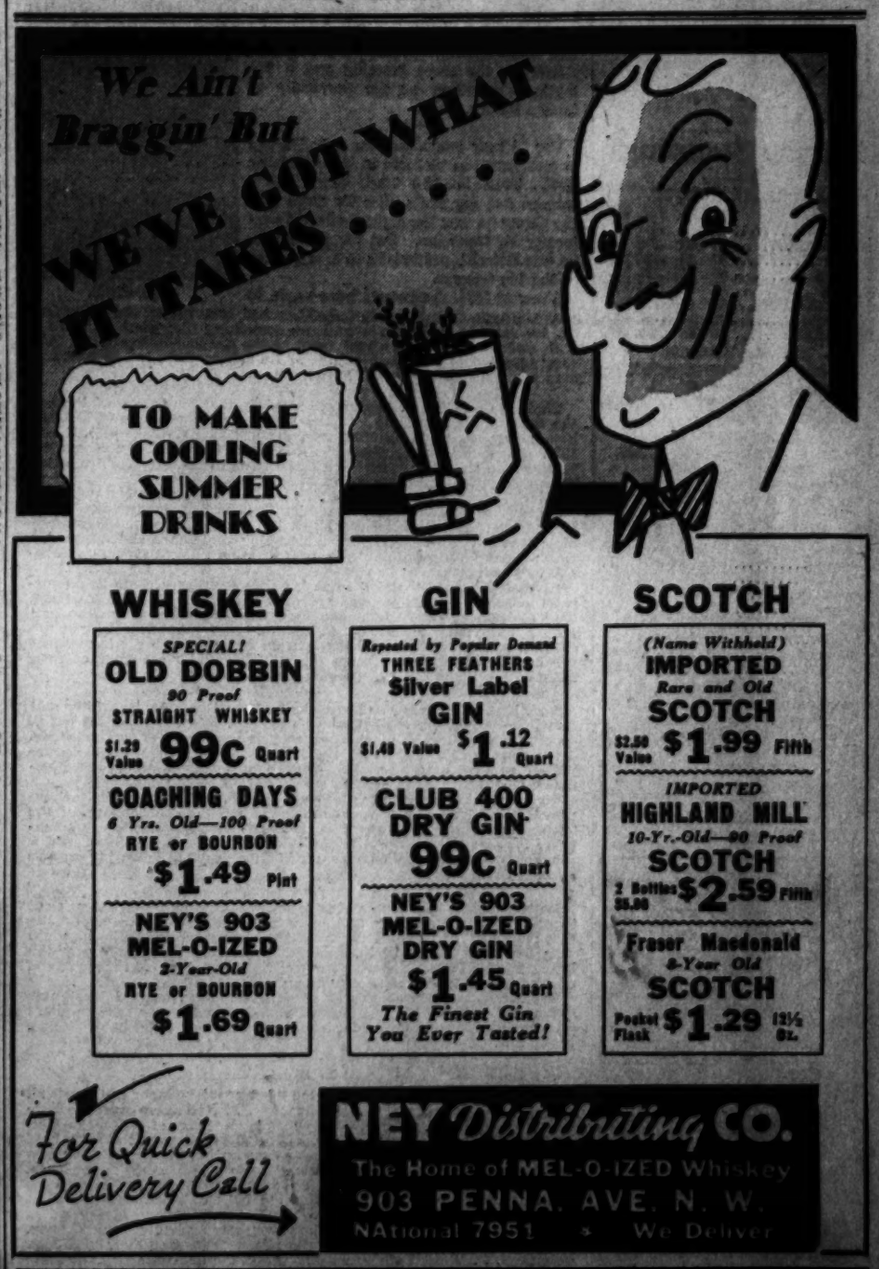
2 Protested Pools To Be Completed

The swimming pools in East Potomac and Anacostia Parks that the March floods and a ruling of former Comptroller General John R. McCarl almost doomed, will be completed, but not in time for swimming this summer.

National Capital Parks officials explained the situation yesterday.

Bids will be submitted in a week or ten days for reinforcement of pool foundations. Last spring's flood demonstrated the need of additional underpiling to prevent sinking in the event of more high water.

McCarl, at first ruled that the contractors would be required to bear the cost of additional construction, but the General Accounting Office later issued a revised opinion, holding that as damage resulted from floods, extra expenditures were justified.



Nats Are Beaten, 11 to 8, in a Shower of Five Cleveland Homers

Stone Socks One With 2 Mates On

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Cleveland, July 30.—Washington pitchers persisted in throwing home run balls to the Indians this afternoon and the Nats collected their fifth straight defeat amid a shower of homers into Lexington avenue which bounds the garden side of the park.

The Indians took the lead with two home runs in the first inning, they tied the score with a home run in the sixth, and they placed the game beyond recall by the Nats with two more in the seventh. Those five home runs contrived to make the score 11 to 8 in favor of Cleveland.

It was in the sixth inning that the last full measure of ignominy overtook the Nats. That was when Lloyd Brown, Cleveland relief pitcher, finding his team trailing, 8 to 7, hoisted a terrific line drive over the right field fence to tie the score.

Joe Cascarella was the victim of that blow, but he was a hero in that inning compared to his status in the next inning. That was when Sammy Hale lifted a homer into the left-field seats and Hal Trosky followed with a home run over the inviting right-field wall to put the Indians in front, 10-8. They scored a run in the ninth when Cecil Travis missed a fly ball, but that didn't matter much.

The Nats gave Jimmy DeShong a 2-0 lead in the first inning and DeShong gave four runs right back to the Indians in the same inning when he pitched Trosky his first home run of the game with two men on base and then pitched a homer to Bruce Campbell.

Washington got into the home-run race in the third inning when Johnny Stone blasted a four-base clout over the rightfield wall with Lewis and Kuhel on base to knock George Blaeholder out of the box and give a 5-4 lead back to DeShong, but a lead was anathema to DeShong today.

He gave the lead right back to the Indians in the same inning after two were out when he pitched a single to Weatherly, walked Campbell and Pytalak and then pitched a single to Knickerbocker with the bases full. Travis' muff on Knickerbocker's single let in the third run of the trio.

With Hudlin in the box in the fourth, the Nats scored a run with Kuhels double driving in Chapman, who had walked, and in the fifth they went into the lead against Lloyd Brown when Millies and Chapman put together a pair of doubles that tied the score at 7-7.

In the seventh, just to be different, Hale hit his particular home run into the leftfield seats and Trosky followed with his second of the game and twenty-ninth of the season into Lexington avenue.

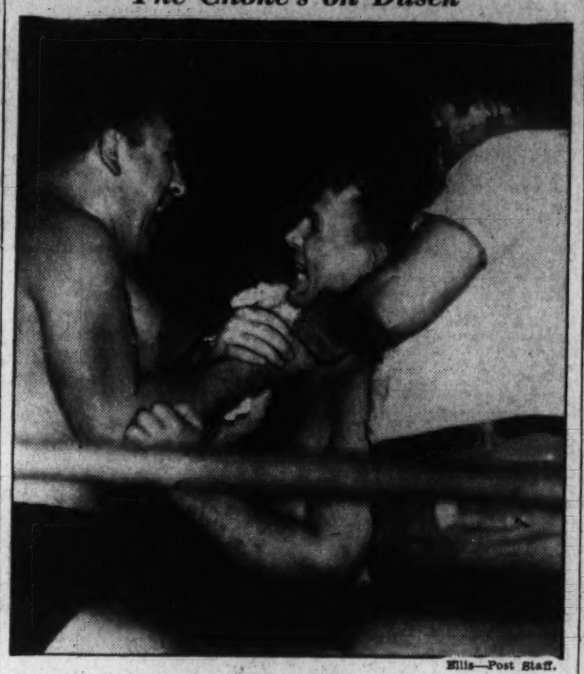
The Choke's on Dusek



Ellis—Post Staff.

Joe Cox, left, is shown choking Joe Dusek with a towel as Referee Cyclone Burns vainly strives to unravel the mess in a wrestling bout at Griffith Stadium last night. Burns finally got the thing straightened out, and then what do you suppose happened? Cox choked Dusek into insensibility as Burns wasn't looking!

Jesse Owens to Retire From Track Next Year

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Berlin, July 30.—Jesse Owens, America's great triple-threat Olympic track and field ace, told the United Press today that he will hang up his spikes within a year, "because I'm married, you know, and I want to earn some money."

The Ohio State University flash who may bring the United States victory in both Olympic sprints and the broad jump said he would compete in the 1937 National A. A. U. championships and maybe barnstorm through Europe next summer, "but after that I'm definitely through."

"I'm going to go out and get a job," Owens added.

Schmarr in Star Role.

Paced by husky Hermie Schmarr, Catholic University football captain-elect, who fanned nine batters and collected five hits for himself, the Sun Dodgers defeated the Hornets, 8-2, in a St. Anthony's Soft Ball League game. Doyle and DeBettencourt aided the winning cause with home runs.

Aggie Netmen Defeat G.A.O. Racqueters, 3-2

Department of Agriculture took three out of four matches from General Accounting Office yesterday in a Departmental Tennis League encounter. The matches were played on the Potomac Park courts.

Agriculture, 3; General Accounting Of. 1.
Hulls and Grant (G. A.) defeated Brown and Rulloda, 5—7, 6—3, 6—2; Medlin and Byrd (Agriculture) defeated Brindell and Meunier, 6—2, 6—2; King and Vom Saal (Agriculture) defeated Marting and Glenn, 7—5, 6—2; Hoffecker and Tuttle (Agriculture) defeated Shade and Ivy, 6—1, 6—3.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 30.

Detroit fans boo Charley Gehringer.

And with that, the great American prerogative of emitting a lusty and raucus hoot of derision at whomsoever incurs their momentary displeasure seems to have beaten down the last retaining wall.

POVICH.

And if there were one athlete who was supposed to be a man apart, immune from the catcalls of even an admittedly fickle fandom, that individual had seemed to be Charley Gehringer. And that the first boos ever directed at Gehringer should find voice among the home-town fans of Detroit is the more amazing and a pathetic commentary on the perversity of human nature.

For 12 long years, Gehringer had given Detroit fans the ultimate in second-basing skill. True, he had taken down heavy salaries and for years after Ty Cobb quit the Tigers he was the highest-salaried performer on the team. But for years, too, he was Detroit's only claim to a super-star of the big leagues.

Along in 1934, the Detroit team began to play the type of ball which Gehringer had been giving the Tiger fans for ten seasons, and won a pennant, something they couldn't achieve with Gehringer playing a lone hand at the starring business. In 1935, they repeated to the great delight of Detroit fandom, but Detroit fandom was apparently spoiled by success.

Their appreciation of Gehringer's services, that they always felt when the team was a loser and his play was their chief source of satisfaction, suffered with the general upswing of Tiger fortunes in 1934 and 1935. Early this week, when the 1936 Tiger club, out of the pennant race, was in the act of absorbing three straight beatings from the Red Sox, history was made at Navin Field.

Then it was the Gehringer with ears that were probably unbelieving heard showered down upon him the derisive boos of the crowd which for a dozen years had naught but applauded him. Shamed by their own act, a minority were touched by conscience and attached a cheer to the fading echo of their boos, but the thing that couldn't happen had happened.

At that, the boos that fell upon his ears may have come as no surprise to Gehringer, despite whatever other reactions he might have had. He has been around the league long enough to know that no ball player is safe from the catcalls of fandom. Detroit has no corner on unsportsmanship, if it is indeed that. From every park in the big leagues the boos have descended upon favorite players in the hour of their failures.

And, if you feel like coining a simile, then it can be truthfully said that there is nothing so diffident as a ball player's tipping of his hat as he crosses the plate on a home-run sock to the cheers of the multitude. Very gingerly, the fingers go up to the visor and a half-tip is accomplished as a mere gesture. The player is probably thinking, and justifiably, what the crowd might have said had he struck out.

The greatest contempt for a crowd that this department ever saw expressed by a ball player was contributed by Hank Greenberg, of the Tigers, three years ago, and you could not blame the fellow. Greenberg, then no established star, a bit clumsy around first base, and a sucker for a right-hander's curves, had been drawing down the crowd's boos all day.

He had kicked in a couple of runs for Washington, he had struck out twice with the bases loaded and heard the air filled with shouts of "take that bum out," or its equivalent. And then he came to bat in the ninth with the bases loaded again, knocked a pitch a country mile over the leftfield fence to win the game for the Tigers by a one-run margin, and crossed the plate with the entire crowd cheering madly.

But Mr. Greenberg simply stood at home plate, applied his thumb to his nose, agitated his fingers rapidly, and then, to make sure he didn't miss anybody, he pirouetted for a half-minute. You could hardly blame the fellow.

In Short.

A month ago, Earl Averill, now the most popular player in Cleveland, was the most-booed player in Cleveland . . . And there were derisive cries of "take him out" in the first world series game of 1924 when Walter Johnson, idol of Washington fans for 20 years, wasn't able to hold the Giants . . . The same Cardinal fans who booed Babe Ruth when he struck out on his first trip to the plate in a 1928 world series game, cheered him for a half hour an hour later when he had socked his third home run of the day . . . But the bulk of the boos directed at Ruth were of the good-natured type and Ruth, knowing it, reveled in 'em . . . The most-booed athlete, however, was probably Gene Tunney, who outraged the feelings of American fans by beating their idol, Jack Dempsey . . . When Tunney walked across the field at a football game in Washington between halves in 1927, the fans slowly counted to 14 in a jeering monotone that recalled the famous 14-count in Chicago.

Dusek Loses Rough Bout At Stadium

By Bill McCormick.

The rocking chair turned over on Rudy Dusek last night, causing the eldest of the four delirious Dueks to become the latest victim of Ivan Managoff in a feature wrestling match before a crowd of 3,500 at Griffith Stadium.

Rudy, it seems, was in a fair way to defeating the Terrible Russian, who previously had beaten his brothers, Emil and Ernie, lesser lights of the Quarrelsome Quartet. The senior member of the famed wrestling aggregation had Ivan in his gruelling, punishing, excruciating—and, one might even say painful—rocking-chair split and was torturing Managoff no end.

Three times Referee Benny (Bubble) Bortnick, the globular arbiter, had tolled "two" over Ivan's shoulders, but never was he able to complete the necessary three count. Suddenly Managoff—the double-crosser—shifted his weight in such a manner as to pin Rudy's shoulders to the mat.

Situation a Little Foggy.

Seeing his duty in a twinkling, Bortnick shifted from the business end of Managoff to the business end of Rudy, counting "one, two, three," over Dusek's shoulders almost as quickly as a fight referee could count to 100.

The outcome muddled the already completely befogged situation surrounding the heavyweight wrestling championship of the world as Rudy Dusek, by virtue of a victory over Danno O'Mahoney, was recognized as heavyweight champion in some quarters of the universe.

Joe Cox pinned Joe Dusek, Rudy's youngest brother, after 13 minutes of a snarlfest scheduled to endure 30 minutes. Cox choked little Dusek into submission with a towel, which was removed after Dusek had become unconscious and before the referee had seen it.

Detroit Rallies To Beat Yanks In 10th, 5-4

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 30.—With Schoolboy Rowe pitching his second winning game against the league leaders in four days, the Tigers came from behind today to defeat the New York Yankees, 5 to 4, in ten innings and cut the pace-setting edge to 7½ games.

A passed ball, which got away from Bill Dickey after Pat Malone had relieved Johnny Broaca, with one out in the tenth, sent the winning run across to give the Tigers an even break in the four-game series.

Lee Jahncke Is Ousted by Committee

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 30.—The biggest pre-Olympic battle tonight was being waged between Japan and Finland, rival bidders for the 1940 games, as Nazi Germany applied the finishing touches to its $25,000,000 athletic extravaganza.

The heaviest oratorical guns were brought into play during an all-day bombardment before the international Olympic committee which, earlier in the day, had ousted Ernest Lee Jahncke, of New Orleans, by a unanimous vote and promptly installed Avery Brundage as his successor.

Officially Jahncke lost his place on the committee on the grounds that he had failed to attend two consecutive meetings of the committee. It was recalled, however, that the New Orleans sportsman and former Assistant Secretary of the Navy opposed American participation if the games were to be held in Germany. Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee and leader in the fight for participation, was suggested as Jahncke's successor by William May Garland of Los Angeles, another member of the international committee.

Despite Tokyo's offer to subsidize the transportation of foreign athletes to the extent of 1,500,000 yen (about $485,000), it looked like a close battle of ballots.

Red Sox in Plane, On Top at Last

Playground Boys' Team Drubs Army-Navy, 7-0

The Playground tennis team for boys 14 years and under defeated an Army-Navy County Club team yesterday on the service club courts, 7-0. Leonard Sokol, District of Columbia boys' champ, swamped DeWitt Armstrong, 6—1, 6—1, in the feature match.

Harry March and Gene Owens, two of the city's leading younger players, will lead the team of boys 18 years and under today, when they meet an Army-Navy team in the same class.

Singles—Sokol (Play.) defeated Armstrong, 6—1, 6—1; Cowan (Play.) defeated Titus, 6—0, 6—2; Horgart (Play.) defeated Beckett, 6—3, 2—6, 6—4; Walsh (Play.) defeated Brown, 6—0, 6—0; Bensinger (Play.) defeated Hall, 6—0, 6—0.

Doubles—Sokol and Walsh (Play.) defeated Titus and Armstrong, 2—6, 7—6, 6—4; Cowan and Bensinger (Play.) defeated Beckett and Brown, 6—4, 6—0.

Loughran Gets Draw.

Montreal, July 30 (AP).—Tommy Loughran, veteran Philadelphia heavyweight, just lasted long enough to gain a draw with Al McCoy, the French-Canadian from Boston, in a stirring 12-round bout here tonight.

Yank Star May Be Out All Season

1,500 Meter Contest To Feature Olympics

By Paul Gallico.

Berlin, July 30—Today was a red letter day at Olympia. Nobody was fired off the American team. At the training track it was possible to see posed for a picture four of the greatest milers of all time. There was old Paavo Nurmi in seedy civilians, his sandy hair receding still more from the forepart of his skull; Jack Lovelock, the Briton, slim, slight, all in white, his wide mouth splitting in a grin; Glenn Cunningham, of Kansas, the American shield on his breast, and Beccali, the Italian and Olympic champion, squat, swarthy and powerful in black trunks and black shirt.

Out of that great quartet only Nurmi will not face the starter's gun in what probably will be the greatest 1,500-meter ever run, the distance equivalent to the mile. But added to it will be a small, skinny Englishman named Wooderson, who, they say, runs in intestinal fortitude alone and who has beaten Lovelock in every start during the last three months; Gerald Backhouse, a galloping Australian; Archie San Romani, a Kansas Italian, who is the dark horse, and Gene Venzke.

Greatest Milers.

The marathon is supposed to be the big feature of the Olympics but no one here is talking about anything but the 1,500 meters. The winner will have beaten the greatest milers that ever lived.

Cunningham's legs are still sore and giving him trouble. He was out on the track at the Olympic Village this morning doing his famous racehorse warm-up, but very tenderly.

The coolest and best-prepared party on the American team is Jesse Owens, who, before his work is done, may win three Olympic titles. This marvelous Negro is the hero of the visiting athletes of all nations and his every spare moment is taken up posing for pictures for them and signing autographs. The Japs are the most inveterate photographers and every moment he is on the track they click cameras at him for permanent record of his style and stride. A thorough people, those Japs.

Owens merely warmed up a little today. The serious training is over, but most of our gang had a session with Coach Lawson Robertson in the starting pits, getting used to the German commands "Achtung!" "fertig!" and the gun. Robertson bawled hell out of a tall African for beating the gun and told him he was only cheating himself since the purpose of the practice was to get used

American Squad Won't Dip Flag, Nazis Are Told

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 30.—Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, today formally notified the German organizing committee that the United States delegation wouldn't dip the flag while passing in review in Saturday's opening ceremonies.

He explained that this was in accordance with American regulations and not to be interpreted as any discourtesy to the Germans. Germany had included in its general parade orders a request that the national colors be dipped before the reviewing stand which Chancellor Hitler will occupy.

Hoag Suffers From a Clot On Brain

Yankee Outfielder May Be Out for Season Due to the Injury.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 30.—Myril Hoag, the New York Yankee outfielder with the steel whip, lay in Harper Hospital tonight with a blood clot on the brain suffered when he collided Tuesday with Joe DiMaggio as they both went for a fly ball.

Dr. William E. Keane, Detroit Tiger club physician, said Hoag's condition was "fair." He said it appeared now that Hoag was out for the season.

Dr. Keane consulted Dr. Frederic Schreiber, a brain specialist, and said that a "minor operation" might be performed. Dr. Harry F. Dibble is in charge of the case.

Back in Game.

Both Hoag and DiMaggio were knocked unconscious when they came together in the game against Detroit. Leon Goslin, the batter, got a freak home run as a result of the accident. Hoag left the game but returned to action Wednesday. DiMaggio apparently suffered no ill effects.

First indications that Hoag was severely injured appeared Thursday morning when he began to suffer dizzy spells. He was taken to the hospital and subsequently lost consciousness and suffered convulsions, Dr. Keane said. These lapses into unconsciousness were only temporary, however, the phyician emphasized.

Mitchell, Hunt Among 65 Seeking Mid-Atlantic Singles Title

Play for Post Trophy Set Today

Mitchell Seeded at Top; McElvenny, Hunt Win 2 Doubles Matches.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Headed by Dooley Mitchell and Gilbert Hunt, a field of 65 tennis players will start play tomorrow at the Edgemoor Club for the Middle Atlantic singles championship and the new Washington Post Challenge Bowl.

According to the seedings made last night, Mitchell is rated No. 1; Hunt, No. 2, and Tom Markey, Ralph McElvenny, Tony Latona, Ed Mather, Rickey Willis and Lieut. Stanley R. Robinson rated after them in that order. The list of seeded visiting players will include Price Colvin, Alex Keiles, Ed Greipenkerl and Frank Roberts, of Baltimore; Lieut. John McCue, of Annapolis, and Jack Talbot, of Staten Island, N. Y.

In the meantime, the Middle Atlantic doubles championships resumed play yesterday at the Army and Navy Country Club. McElvenny and Hunt, the No. 2 seeded team, set a red-hot pace by winning two matches in straight sets to gain the semifinals.

McElvenny, Hunt a Threat.

McElvenny, former national intercollegiate doubles champion from Stanford, and Hunt, former national intercollegiate runner-up to Gene Mako, celebrated their first appearance on the courts together by blasting aside young John O'Malley and Eugene Owens, of Western High School, 6—3, 6—3, 6—4.

A few minutes later, Rollicking Ralph, who won the championship last year, joined Hunt to eliminate the formidable Annapolis combination of Lieut. John McCue and Lieut. Richard Dole, 6—3, 6—3, 6—4. With the cagy McElvenny in usual form, and Hunt firing over a puzzling service and a devastating overhead, the No. 2 seeded team looked a decided threat to any team it may meet, including Mitchell and Markey.

The latter pair, seeded No. 1, eliminated Stan McCaskey, finalist in the recent Middle States doubles at Pittsburgh, and Larry Phillips, 8—6, 6—4, 6—4. It was an impressive victory over a strong team.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

First Round.

Tom Bransford and Crawford Brookes defeated Bob Burwell and Keer Wiseman, 6—2, 6—2, 6—3; Bob Bradley and Harry Goldsmith defeated Nate Ritzenberg and Happy Jacobs, 11—9, 6—4, 7—5.

Second Round.

Ralph McElvenny and Gilbert Hunt defeated John O'Malley and Eugene Owens, 6—3, 6—3, 6—4; Lieut. Richard Dole and Lieut. John McCabe defeated Lawrence and Raphael Sherfy, 6—0, 6—2, 6—2; Dooley Mitchell and Tom Markey defeated Stan McCaskey and Larry Phillips, 8—6, 6—4, 6—3; Hugh Lynch and Ed Mather defeated Ed Becker and William Mehaffey, 6—4, 6—2, 6—1; Herb Shenkin and Ray Stocklinski defeated Commander DeMitt Redgrave and Austin Rice, 6—0, 6—2, 6—3; Bradley and Goldsmith were tied with Joe Baker and Fred Doyle, 6—4, 5—7, 6—4, 4—8, postponement.

Quarter-finals.

McElvenny and Hunt defeated McCue and Dole, 6—3, 6—3, 6—4.

Clark Griffith Helps the Kids

Clark Griffith, President of the Washington Ball Club, delivers to Charles Moore, of The Washington Post, a check for $688.18 for the Summer Camp Fund, sponsored by The Post. That amount represents one-third of the rental of Griffith Stadium for the Barney Ross-Phil Furr fight and swelled the fund to $1,800.

Burnett Takes Indian Spring Golf Play

Volney Burnett, Washington's fireman-golfer, won the Tribal Bow championship at Indian Spring Country Club yesterday by defeating Alex Baumgartner, veteran player, 2 and 1, in the 36-hole final.

Three up at the end of 18 holes Sunday, Burnett won the first three holes yesterday to go 6 up. Baumgartner rallied and only some daring shooting by Burnett along the stretch enabled him to stave off impending defeat.

Both shot approximate 75's. Burnett also holds the Indian Spring Club championship.

A pro-amateur sweepstakes will be sponsored by the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. next Monday at the Mount Pleasant golf course in Baltimore, starting at 1 p. m. Professionals may play with as many as three amateur partners.

Claude Rippy, runner-up in the National Public Links championship, will get his first shot at Beaver Dam Country Club's long and rugged course tomorrow afternoon. He will play with Eddie Bean, former club champion.

Wiffy Cox, Kenwood Golf and Country Club professional, scored a 34, 35—69, 1 under par, yesterday at Columbia Country Club. It was the first time this season Cox played the Columbia course. Playing with him were Levi Yoder, Middle Atlantic champion, and Gene Pittman, both of Kenwood, who will compete in the National Amateur sectional trials at Columbia August 25. Yoder scored a 74, Pittman 76.

Station 36 Wins Rout.

Post Station 36 overwhelmed Station 33, 26 to 8, in a Washington Post League game at the Monument Grounds yesterday. M. Corman's homer and R. Smith's five hits out of six times at bat, were high points in the winner's scoring flurry.

Even Gridmen Get Comeback Fever

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, July 30.—Can a man in his forties play college football successfully?

The Atlanta Journal, in an article signed by Morgan Blake, its sports editor, says the question will be answered this fall when Loane West—after 19 years—goes back to the University of California to try to make the football team again this fall.

O. B. Keeler, of the Journal sport staff, identified Loane as "Bill" West, who played a substitute end with California in 1917.

Pro Golf Tourney Awarded Pitt Club

The 1937 Professional Golfers Association Championship has been awarded to the Pittsburgh Field Club, and will be held May 24-30, George R. Jacobus, P. G. A. president, announced last night.

A $12,000 guarantee gave the tourney to the Pittsburgh Club, Jacobus said.

Although it will be the first time the championship has been held so early in the year, Jacobus predicted it would prove popular with the pros, enabling the champion to make the most of his title.

This year's P. G. A. championship will be held in November in Pinehurst, N. C.

McDiarmid Gains Seabright Finals

Seabright, N. J., July 30 (AP).—Two unseeded and virtually unknown players crashed the finals of the forty-ninth annual Seabright invitation tennis tournament today when 17-year-old Joseph Hunt, of Los Angeles, defeated Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., after scholarly John McDiarmid, of Fort Worth, Tex., crushed Sidney Wood, of New York.

Hunt displayed Davis Cup calibre in turning back Mangin's bid for his second successive Seabright title, 6—1, 11—9, 11—13, 6—4, while McDiarmid took a tip from National Champion Wilmer Allison to score against Wood at 6—2, 4—6, 6—1, 6—1.

Department Tank Stars Vie Tonight

Maryland Club Pool Is Scene of Meet.

With 100 entries, representing 23 Government organizations, the second annual swimming meet of the Interdepartmental Water Polo and Swimming League will be held tonight at the Maryland Club Garden pool.

Keen competition is expected in the diving event, in which Joe Lyman and Johnny Broaddus, both former District champions, are entered.

Favorites in the free style events are Paul Wilson, of the Resettlement; Roger Leverton, of Justice Department, both former Central High School tank stars.

As an added feature, Miss Margaret Hoffman, 1932 Olympic breast stroker, will give a special exhibition of form swimming.

Lewis Beats Gainer; Decision Is Unanimous

Lewis, who weighed 178¼ gained the unanimous decision.

Guest, Smith, Iglehart Rated 10-Goal Poloists

London, July 30 (AP).—Winston Guest and Stewart Iglehart, of New York, and Cecil Smith, of Texas, were given ten-goal handicaps today by the Hurlingham Polo Club handicap committee.

Iglehart and Guest were raised from eight goals, while Smith was raised from nine. Thus, along with the veteran Tommy Hitchcock, Jr., of New York, they are the only ten-goal players in the world.

Royal Veil Wins Charles Town Feature; Double Pays $312.20

Upsets Mark Day of Big Mutuels

Fair Sun Returns $41 in Third; Feature Is Worth $11.40.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 30.—Sammy Palumbo, West Virginia's ace rider, and Royal Veil, a gray gelding which looks as if it has been sleeping in a coal bin, teamed to win the Piedmont Purse, feature race here today. Taking the lead before the echo of the starting bell had died away, Royal Veil made every post a winning one and rewarded his backers with an $11.40 mutuel.

There was much puffing and huffing behind Royal Veil but with the finish line reached the son of Herodote had a six-length advantage over Cora Kay. Gay Bride was the well-backed third in the field of eight.

The day was marked by the beatings taken by the favorites and was productive of a $312.20 daily double. Jockey Moe Berg rode Lady Cirek, a $21.60 proposition, to victory in the first half of the twin wager and W. Snyder completed the deal by guiding Fair Sun to the wire. Fair Sun stole the race, however.

Fair Sun Pays $41.20.

Tambov, the favorite, had a ten-length lead approaching the stretch but insisted on running out and finally went to the outside fence. Fair Sun hugged the rail at the turn and gained the ground that decided the issue. Fair Sun brought a $41.20 mutuel.

The Bond family, of Baltimore, broke into the win column with the running of the fifth race, the Culpeper Purse. Mrs. M. N. Bond has jockey Palumbo to thank for the victory as well as the filly. He gave Timber Phantom an excellent ride and he won by a neck because he chose to come through on the rail at the stretch turn. Povel, which ran Lady Buck into submission, was second. Timber Phantom paid a $7.80 mutuel.

ELLEN LANE	(Wisner)	115	8	8	8	8	8	93.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAPPY NYMPH, $29.00, $14.00, $8.40; SKEABOY, $4.60, $3.80; TIMBER LADY, $4.40.

HAPPY NYMPH went to the front going to the far turn, continued gamely when headed by TIMBERLADY entering the stretch and held SKEABOY safe under driving tactics. SKEABOY, within striking distance from the start, saved much ground entering the stretch and was wearing down the winner slowly. TIMBER LADY, hard ridden to take command, faltered in the closing 50 yards. WORTHFUL could not threaten. SUN BELLE could not reach contention and had no excuses. ELLEN LANE was virtually left.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:10. Winner, J. T. Harris' b. f. (4), by Rustic—Fallacy. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:20 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY CIREK, $21.60, $8.60, $8.00; CANOPIA, $7.80, $4.60; GAGNE, $9.40.

LADY CIREK, in close attendance of the leaders from the start, went to the outside for racing room and wore down CANOPIA in the final drive. The latter ran MAINS WANDER into defeat and continued gamely. GAGNE improved his position steadily after three furlongs and closed willingly. MAINS WANDER went to the front at once, but began to tire leaving the backstretch. LONE MISS closed a gap in the late stages. PLAIN ACE, in close quarters going to the first turn, dropped out of it after three furlongs.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:41. Off at 3:46. Winner, H. C. Allnutt's br. m. (8), by Eliminator—Eureka. Trained by G. E. Littlefield. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:22 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIR SUN, $41.20, $23.40, $6.60; TAMBOV, $4.60, $4.00; FAMOUS CLAYTON, $2.80.

FAIR SUN gained steadily while saving ground, took command when TAMBOV ran out at the stretch turn and had to be ridden out to hold advantage. TAMBOV sprinted to the front at once, drewout to a long lead approaching the stretch, but went to the outside fence and finished gamely. FAMOUS CLAYTON raced wide all the way. GAY LASS could not reach contention. DARK SUPINET tired from chasing the pace. CLIFTON'S NELL was through early.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $312.20.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:18½. Winner, Col. A. E. Pierce's gr. g. (6), by Herodote—Crepe. Trained by G. Russell. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:22.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL VEIL, $11.40, $5.60, $3.60; CORA KAY, $11.20, $6.20; GAY BRIDE, $4.00.

ROYAL VEIL, sent to the front under hustling tactics, was hard ridden throughout and easily drew out on opponents. CORA KAY, outrun for three furlongs, came with a rush when put to drive. GAY BRIDE faltered after pressing the pacemaker. MISS SYMPHONY raced wide most of the way. FLOWER TIME went in the air at the break and closed ground in the late stages. JUSTA FLIGHT had no excuses. RADIAL showed a dull effort.

FIFTH RACE—About seven furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:50. Winner, Mrs. M. N. Bond's ch. f. (4), by Tall Timber—Black Phantom. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:28.

Cards Shut Out Dodgers, and Win, 7-0

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, July 30.—The St. Louis Cardinals' star rookie trio, led by Pitcher Jim Winford, who pitched four-hit shutout ball, led the way to a 7-to-0 victory over the Dodgers today, pulling the gashouse gang up to one slim game off the National League pace.

In addition to Winford, the other youngsters having a big hand in the victory were First Baseman Johnny Mize, who banged out two hits, one a homer in the sixth, and Third-sacker Arthur Garibaldi, who drove in 1 run with a long fly, and had two hits.

Mrs. Hill Loses In Shawnee Golf Final

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Buckwood-Inn Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, July 30.—Mrs. Bishop Hill, of Washington, today fell before the sharp-shooting of little Virginia Bascom, of Worcester, Mass., in the finals of the Shawnee golf championship, 4 and 3.

Mrs. Hill, who putted brilliantly yesterday in defeating Mrs. Meckley, was badly off in this department today. Many times during the match a short putt would have meant the winning or halving of a hole and the Washington player missed on each occasion.

The first two holes of the match were halved, but starting with the third, Miss Bascom took the next five in succession. She won the third with a par five when Mrs. Hill missed her second, and on the fourth Mrs. Hill missed a four-footer for a half. The Massachusetts girl's iron on the short fifth stopped three feet from the cup and she easily rolled it in for her two and a win. Mrs. Hill hooked her tee shot on the sixth, the ball finding the rough. However, she still had a chance for a half, but blew a five-foot putt.

Long Seventeenth.

Miss Bascom played the long seventh beautifully and was home on the 540-yard hole with three shots to win with a 5 par. The final two holes on the outgoing nine were halved and Mrs. Hill made the turn five down to her 20-year-old opponent.

She braced coming in to take the eleventh and twelfth with two pars, but the next two were halved and Miss Bascom took the match on the fifteenth with a par 4 to Mrs. Hill's 5.

Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Washington, won from Mrs. L. B. Platt, of the same city, in the finals of the first flight consolation by the score of 3 and 2.

Sunset at Solomons Island, Mecca for Local Fishermen

The day is done and the fishing craft in the foreground is made fast at Solomons Island, local fishing paradise. The sinking sun reveals in sharp silhouette in the background ocean-going liners held for emergencies by the Shipping Board.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

Salt water fishing gains in impetus, whenever the bluefish are "whamming" the well-known feathered jig or choice bit of fresh alewife. Inquiries as to "what has happened to the bluefishing on the famous Middles grounds is giving the letter carrier one more curvature to his spinal column and the writer a depleted supply of typewriter ribbons. Don't be downhearted, anglers. There are plenty of bluefish in the bay and the time is nearly ripe for good fishing for them in its tributaries.

Our records prove that during the month of July last year blue fishing was approximately the same. August showed a tremendous improvement and September the best of all.

Many years ago the bluefish established the coast of Maine as their migrating objective and at that time the fish were not abundant. Fifteen and 20 pounders were not uncommon At the present time Massachusetts is about the limit of their range. We have checked and found that this prima donna has finally arrived within its northern range and are beginning to settle down to the serious habit of fattening up on bait fishes. This is the beginning of the "branching out" of the schools and when this occurs in the Chesapeake its tidal waters will begin to provide good fishing as far north as Shadyside where the smaller fish known as "tailors" are found in large numbers.

In some localities native names such as "greenfish" or "snapping mackerel" are frequently used. The bluefish is now being caught from Block Island to Cape May with regularity. In Long Island Sound boatmen have been returning to Saybrook, Conn., with as many as 30 to 40 good-sized fish weighing about 8 pounds which is far above the average in former years. Along the southern shore of Long Island large schools of bluefish are cutting up bait close to shore. Down the New Jersey coast bluefish are very plentiful. At Beach Haven the catches indicate the run has been good and the size here is also above normal.

There is no doubt in the mind of the writer but what the blues have moved temporarily and will return —they always have in recent years and this one should be no exception considering recent performances. How many anglers have tried chumming between buoys 14 and 16 at Northwest Middles or over around Holland Light. Try it.

Manush Is Fined $25 As Bat Hits Daughter

St. Louis, July 30 (AP).—President Will Harridge of the American League told Heinie Manush, of the Boston Red Sox, today he would remit a $25 fine assessed last Sunday if the outfielder is good for the rest of the season.

The penalty was assessed after Manush, angry because a Detroit player nabbed a liner that seemed a certain hit, threw his bat in front of the dugout. It bounded into a box, striking Manush's daughter. She was not hurt.

Local Party Catches Over 250 Hardheads

William Garnett, Herman Statskin and Charles Fifes caught over 250 hardheads on a fishing expedition Wednesday night. They took a boat at Kenwood beach for the Gooses, under Capt. Dodson. They reported very few trout in comparison with the number of hardheads. Fifes led the party with the largest number and also the largest fish of the evening.

Havoc to Corn Rockets Price 4 Cents Higher

Wheat, Oats and Rye Also Advance in Excited Pit Trading.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 30.—Alarm resulting from official statements indicative of widening disaster to the Nation's corn crop whirled the corn market 4 cents a bushel skyward today. In six of the largest producing States—Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and South Dakota—it was announced half of the corn crop has been damaged beyond recovery. So excited was buying at times in the pits that simultaneous dealings in different parts of the corn crowd were at prices 2 cents apart.

Corn closed strong at the day's top level, the highest point reached in six years 3⅞@4⅛ above yesterday's finish, September 98, December 90⅝, May 91½; wheat 1⅛@1⅝ up, September 110@110⅛, December, 110⅝@111; May, 112; oats, 1½@2 cents advance; September, 40¼@40⅝, and rye showing 2¼@2⅞ bulge; September, 78⅞. Brokers' Loans Drop $32,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers, held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City, were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board to have totaled $938,000,000 for the week ended yesterday, decrease of $32,000,000 for the week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $850,000,000.

Reserve Balances Gain $81,000,000

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported last night that member bank reserve balances resumed their upward trend during the week ended July 29 with an increase of -81,000,000, bringing the total to $6,016,000. This amount was about $3,050,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

The balances were built up by a return of $30,000,000 of money in circulation, aided by a transfer of $48,000,000 of Treasury cash from Federal Reserve banks to commercial institutions.

The inflow of gold continued orderly during the week, increasing by $8,000,000 This brought American stocks to $10,642,000,000.

Freight Car Orders Set 7-Year Record

More new freight cars were on order by Class 1 railroads of the United States on July 1, this year, than on any July 1 since 1929, the Association or American Railroads announced yesterday. Orders for new freight equipment by the various railroads on July 1, last, called for 28,069 cars, compared with 2,428 new freight cars on July 1, 1935, and 17,813 cars on July 1, 1934. On July 1, 1929, equipment orders included 39,638 new freight cars.

New locomotives on order July 1, this year, included 67 steam and 23 of the electric and Diesel types, compared with six steam locomotives and 22 electric locomotives on order on July 1, 1935, and 40 steam and 107 electric locomotives on order, July 1, 1934.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended July 25 as approximately 7,220,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week, 1935, 6,311,000 tons; 1934, 5,947,000 tons.

2.66 Billions Of New Issues In Six Months

Total of Effectives Is Four Times Volume of 1935 Period.

Analysis of statements registered under the securities act of 1933, during the six months ended June 30, indicates that securities with estimated gross proceeds of $2,664,497,000 became fully effective, slightly more than four times as great an amount as the $665,339,000, effectively registered during the first half of 1935. These figures are exclusive of amounts registered in connection with the issuance of certificates of deposit and voting trust certificates. The figures, however, include $494,378,000 in 1936 and $104,142,000 in 1935 of securities intended for purposes other than cash sale for the account of the registrants.

Manufacturing companies were the largest registrants with a total of $1,026,291,000 securities, 38.5 per cent of the total registrations,—reflecting largely financing by the iron and steel and the oil-refining industries, each of which effectively registered more than $300,000,000 of securities. Utility companies were second with $841,421,000, 31.6 per cent of the total, and financial and investment companies were next in importance with $351,842,000, 13.2 per cent of the total securities effectively registered.

Common Stocks 19.3 per cent.

Fixed-interest bearing securities constituted the predominant type of security included in these registrations: 47.5 per cent were secured bonds, 21.4 per cent were debentures, and 0.2 per cent were short-term notes. Common stock issues comprised 19.3 per cent of the total, preferred stock issues, 8.5 per cent, and certificates of participation, beneficial interest, etc., 3.1 per cent.

A wider use of stock issues, both common and preferred, and of debenture issues was visable in the registrations of the January-June, 1936, period. After deducting the issues reserved for conversion and for the exercise of warrants, there remained $311,036,000 of common stock issues that were proposed to be offered for sale, more than four-fold the $67,140,000 figure for the comparable 1935 period. Preferred stock issues amounted to $226,177,000 as against $43,380,000 in the first half of 1935 and debenture issues totaled $569,413,000 against $65,802,000 in the previous year. Almost 20 per cent of the aggregate of the debenture issues had convertible features and another 20 per cent carried stock-purchase warrants.

Bank of England.

London, July 30 (AP).—The Bank of England statement for the week ended July 29 (in thousands of pounds): Circulation 448,570, increase 4,976; bullion 240,948, increase 4,223; reserves 82,377, decrease 754; public deposits 42,282, increase 22,358; private deposits 114,590, decrease 22,086; government securities 96,408; increase, 635; other securities 26,224 increase 405. The proportion of the bank's reserve to liability is 33.30 per cent, as compared with 33.90 last week. Rate of discount, 2 per cent.

Stocks Absorb Further Profit-Taking in Less Active Trading; Commodities Rise.

New York, July 30—Government bonds were a little soft and further profit taking gave the stock list an irregular appearance. Stock sales volume was sharply reduced, regarded in speculative quarters as a good sign, the turnover amounting to around 1,500,000 shares. Nearly all commodities advanced. September wheat futures at Chicago closed 1⅛ cents higher at 110 cents a bushel.

Activity and strength in the airplane shares was the stock market feature. Gains ranging from 1 to 5 points were made. Wright Aero did the best on odd lot transactions. Boeing reached a new high price. Douglas and Sperry absorbed profit taking. T. W. A. gained 2 points. Steel shares recovered about half of the previous day's losses.

No great interest was taken in the public utility group. Profit taking held down Consolidated Edison. Oils were firm, with Jersey moving up a fraction. Small gains were recovered for mail order shares, rubbers, coppers and foods. Most of the mercantile shares were mixed.

Silvers Tarnished.

Silvers were further depressed. A sour note was struck by the decreased earnings shown for International Silver. United States Smelting broke more than 3 points. Farm implements fell off on talking up of the drought damage. General Motors was unable to hold an early rise, but Chrysler found the path smoother. Rails were active and mostly higher, particularly Southern, Santa Fe, Great Northern and Pennsylvania. Special attention was given Car & Foundry and a few of the other rail equipments.

Miscellaneous stocks to draw speculative attention included Coca-Cola, which brought its gain for the week to a dozen points; General Foods, under considerable pressure, and Munsingwear, rising 3 points on a dividend payment and earnings statement. Allied Chemical and American Can weakened, but most of the standard issues, including Western Union, General Electric and Westinghouse, hardened.

Foreign Affairs Disturb.

In foreign exchange the French franc continued to lose ground, although it still was 3 points above the gold point. The recent sale of baby bonds in France was even less popular than it has proved to be here. News from Spain was conflicting and scanty. Those who have had occasion to telephone to Spain or to inquire indirectly through France as to conditions there say it is impossible to get any news, but rumors abound.

For that reason Wall Street gave no great importance to the State Department's report from a consul at Barcelona that no American property had been seized, particularly that of General Motors. The fact is a good deal of worrying is being done by the managements of American corporations with extensive interests in Spain.

Spending, Spending.

While the heartening increase in corporation earnings and the favorable reports on industry in general continue to brighten the gloomy corners of business, in spite of continuance of the drought in some sections and the turmoil in Europe, Government finance continues somewhat foggy. For all the business improvement, which must have lessened the burden of unemployment (and the Government's own figures show it), news from Washington says that already the Treasury has disbursed a third of the new relief fund of nearly one and a half billions, designed to run the relief business for a full year.

Admittedly the drought may have increased the call for funds, although response seems to have been somewhat more prompt than the drought effects could be felt. Just the same, some people will feel that it costs more money to "take care of" people in an election summer than it does in other years, for all the 40 to 50 per cent increase in business activity. The Treasury will have to borrow more money, and it will have to pay more for it.

Apropos of spending and borrowing by the Government, the financial district was particularly interested in a Washington dispatch saying that the RFC considered taking over from the Commodity Credit Corporation the unsold portion of the $150,000,000 of notes offered by the corporation recently to public investors. Another Washington dispatch quoted the Secretary of Agriculture as saying that the corporation had turned into the Treasury $56,000,000 in cash obtained from the liquidation of cotton loans.

Self-Help.

If recent Treasury daily statements, which show that Commodity Credit Corporation this month has accumulated an excess of credits of $78,000,000 in the United States Treasury, reflect the receipt of the cotton money, then the subscriptions turned in on account of the $150,000,000 note offering must have been much smaller than had been generally supposed. The Commodity Credit Corporation a year ago was given a large sum of money to take up acceptances against cotton held by banks. It borrowed the money from the RFC, which borrowed it from the Treasury.

Now the CCC, which has just paid back to the RFC $56,000,000 and which hoped to get money by the $150,000,000 note issue to repay more to the RFC, will have to get the latter to take up the notes that were to have produced cash to be given to the RFC, not taken from it. Leaving aside the matter of the RFC lending money to repay itself, it seems difficult to see how the Government lending agency can make money by investing it at less than the rate at which the Treasury lends to it.

British Sale.

The bond trading fraternity indulged in a good deal of speculation as to how the $25,000,000 to be received by Utilities Power & Light in September for the sale of its British properties, in accordance with the deal made by Atlas Corporation, would be spent. While that is for directors of the company to decide, obviously it was easy for any one with pencil and paper to figure that the corporation could best use the money to buy in the market its debentures or negotiate for private purchases of them at advantageous terms. There would be no point to calling bonds for redemption when they are so far below par. Both the 5s and 5½s again rose to new highs. The British Treasury authorities have already consented to the payment of the large sum called for under the agreement, but the contract is for delivery of dollars, which leaves it to the British to pick up dollars by whatever means they choose.

Remon Elected Vice President Of C. & P. Tel.

Robinson Succeeds Him as General Manager; Van Orsdel Promoted.

John A. Remon and Ralph A. Van Orsdel have been elected vice presidents, and Charles A. Robinson, general manager, of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., according to an announcement yesterday by Lloyd B. Wilson, president. Mr. Remon will be in charge of operations, succeeding Marshal D. Sedam, who is retiring. Mr. Van Orsdel will continue as general counsel of the company, which position he has held since March 1, 1930. Mr. Remon has been general manager of the company in Washington since May 1, 1931, and is now being succeeded by Mr. Robinson, who has previously been general manager of the company in West Virginia, with headquarters at Charleston.

Mr. Redmond has been an official of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. since December, 1925, when he became general traffic supervisor. He was appointed general traffic manager in 1927 and general manager of the company in Virginia in 1929. His service with the Bell system began in September, 1909, when he was engaged by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in the long lines department in Baltimore. Subsequently he was located at Philadelphia and at New York. Since coming to Washington, Mr. Remon has been active in civic affairs and for several years has been president of the President's Cup Regatta. He is also active in the Washington Board of Trade and in boys club work. He was educated at the Worcester (Mass.), Polytechnic Institute.

Van Orsdel a Nebraskan.

Mr. Van Orsdel came to Washington from Omaha, Nebr., where he had been in general practice. He was educated at the University of Nebraska, graduating in the class of 1906. He also was graduated from Creighton University in the class of 1910 with an LL. B. degree. He is active in the American Bar Association and in civic affairs.

Mr Robinson was formerly chief engineer of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Companies, with headquarters at Washington. Since May 1, 1931, he has been general manager of the company in West Virginia, with headquarters at Charleston. Before coming to the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Companies as chief engineer he was transmission engineer of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Previously as a representative of the Western Electric Co. he had served a tour of duty in France in connection with a large toll telephone cable project, started soon after the World War.

Mr. Sedam, retiring vice president, entered the employ of the Bell System at Indianapolis in 1903. In April, 1907, he was transferred to the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. He remained with this company until February, 1922, when he was appointed general traffic manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Companies, with headquarters at Washington. He was appointed general manager of these companies in May, 1927, and vice president and a member of the board of directors of the companies in 1929.

Clearings Decline 7% From Year Ago

New York, July 30 (AP).—The irregular trend which has marked bank clearings since the beginning of July was continued to the end of the month.

The total reported to Dun & Bradstreet for 22 leading cities in the United States for the week ended Wednesday, July 29, was $4,637,981,000, against $4,779,242,000 for the similar period last year, a decline of 7 per cent.

At New York City clearings fell to $2,719,840,000 from $3,561,464,000 last week, and were 13.3 per cent under the $3,136,448,000 recorded for last year.

The total of $1,918,441,000 for outside centers, however, represented a gain of 16.8 per cent over the 1935 comparative.

Washington Clearings.

The Washington Clearing House reports total clearings of $18,065,215.12 for the week ended July 29, which compared with $15,634,388.18 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of 15.5 per cent. Compared with $21,604,788.83 for the previous week, clearings decreased 16.3 per cent.

Federal Report Sees Good Cotton Market

A strong market position for cotton was indicated yesterday by an Agriculture Department report on world cotton prospects. Rising prices during June and early July were attributed to the high level of world consumption of American cotton compared with last year. The small supply in private hands, reduction in stocks of Government-financed cotton, and a belief that the coming crop would show only a moderate increase over last year's.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics said the highest daily price for cotton this season was 13.42 cents July 10 with an average of 13.08 for the week ending July 18.

S. S. Kresge Declares Extra 30c Dividend

Chicago, July 30 (AP).—Directors of S. S. Kresge Co. today declared an extra dividend of 30 cents and the regular quarterly payment of 25 cents on the common stock in addition to the regular quarterly of $1.75 on the preferred. The dividends are payable September 30 to stock of record September 10.

Beth. Steel Net $3,431,351 In 2d Quarter

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 30.—Bethlehem Steel Corporation today reported net income for the three months ended June 30 of $3,431,391, the best profit since the second quarter of 1934, and with that exception since the third quarter of 1930. Directors declared the regular quarterly dividends of $1.75 on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock and 25 cents on the $20 par 5 per cent preferred. Both are payable October 1 to stock of record September 4.

Income for the latest quarter equals 49 cents a common share after allowing for preferred dividend requirements. This compares with $603,083 or 65 cents a share on the 7 per cent preferred in the first three months of this year and $1,800,909 or 5 cents a share on the common stock in the corresponding period of 1935.

For the first half net income amounted to $4,034,456, equal after dividends on both classes of preferred stock, to 17 cents a share on the common. In the corresponding period of 1935 net profit was $1,103,811, or $1.28 a share, on the 7 per cent preferred.

Commercial Credit Peak.

Baltimore, July 30.—The consolidated semi-annual report of Commercial Credit Co. for the six months ended June 30 shows a record volume of purchases and earnings, by far the largest for any six months period in the company's history. Gross purchases of receivables for the period were $402,489,870 which compares with $267,119,272 for the same period of 1935.

Net income from operations available for dividends after providing for all Federal and other taxes, except Federal surtaxes on undistributed earnings, credited to earned surpus for the six months period of 1936 was $5,077,769. This is another high record and compares with $3,945,286 similarly credited for the same period of 1935.

Net income for the six months ended June 30 applicable to the common stock was $3.60 per share. Net income for the 12 months ended June 30 applicable to the common stock was $6.70 per share.

Hudson Motor Record.

New York, July 30.—Hudson Motor Car Co. and subsidiaries report for the six months ended June 30, consolidated net profit of $2,144,804.86 after charges including depreciation but before provision for Federal income taxes. Earnings are the largest for any half-year period since the first six months of 1930 and compare with net profit of $560,977.53 before Federal income taxes for the corresponding period last year.

Net profit for the second quarter, before Federal income taxes, totaled $1,551,977.80, likewise the best showing for any quarter since the first three months of 1930, and comparing with $592,826.97, before Federal income taxes, in the first quarter of this year, and $325,367.05, before Federal income taxes, for the second quarter of 1935.

El Salvador to Pay $850,000 on Bonds

New York, July 30.—Payment of $850,000, the largest single cash payment that has come out of Central or South America for bondholders since 1929, will be made today by the Republic of El Salvador as a result of the holders of a substantial majority of the outstanding bonds of all series of the Republic having assented to the recently announced re-adjustment agreement.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

After 46 years of Government service, Abraham B. Keefer, who looks much less than 70, will retire tomorrow as one of the attorneys on the staff of Karl A. Crowley, solicitor for the Postoffice Department.

Keefer is going to celebrate his retirement by taking a prolonged motor trip through New England so that he can attend the sessions of the American Bar Association at Boston and then will return to Washington and begin to build up a private law practice.

The job which Keefer leaves is one in which he had charge of adjudicating the claims of postmasters all over the country when their stamps or postoffice funds were stolen, destroyed by fire or otherwise unavoidably lost. And postmasters lose about $300,000 a year in these ways, a large proportion of their losses being by holdups.

In Chicago alone there are about 100 holdups of postoffices a month, but usually the haul of the marauders is not great. One of the changes in the rulings on these losses was made during the present Administration. Before that postmasters were required to put their official funds in banks at their own risks and this the Administration changed so that they would not be held responsible for losses in bank failures in particular.

In 1890, when Benjamin Harrison was President, Keefer left his home near Harrisburg, Pa., and took his first Government job. He was one of the luck ones who survived the tragedy in the old Ford Theater on June 9, 1895, when part of two floors of the building collapsed causing the death of 21 clerks and seriously injuring scores of others.

Shortly after he came to Washington, he began to attend law classes at George Washington University and in 1897 was admitted to the bar of the District. Among his Government jobs was that of assistant chief of division in the office of the auditor for the Postoffice and as an auditor of postmasters' accounts when that office became part of the General Accounting Office. For the past 14 years he has been an attorney in the solicitor's office.

Several days ago his fellow workers gave him a farewell party, which was attended by a number of Postoffice officials and at which he was presented with a traveling bag for him to take with him on his New England motor trip.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces that it will accept applications not later than August 24 for various grades of soil conservationist (farm planning) positions. Employment will be in the soil conservation service in the Department of Agriculture.

The entrance salaries range from $2,600 to $4,600 a year, less a retirement deduction of 3½ per cent.

Full information may be obtained from the Washington office of the United States Civil Service Commission.

The big summer celebration of the American Federation of Government Employes is scheduled for Tuesday evening, when everybody is expecting to have a "large time" on a boat trip down the Potomac. All the lodges are taking an active part in the plans for the outing, which have been worked out by the ways and means committee of the District Department of which Ira Y. Bain is the chairman.

The work of two Government scientists has been recognized by the National Research Council by honorary committee appointments for the coming year. R. P. Barss, the chief botanist and administrative associate in the office of experimental stations of the Department of Agriculture, recently was asked to take the vice chairmanship of the division of biology and agriculture in the council. Dr. John R. Swanton, an ethnologist with the Bureau of American Ethnology at the Smithsonian Institution, accepted a similar post with the council's committee on anthropology and psychology.

Barss came to Washington in March, 1934, and before that time was head of the department of botany and plant pathology at the Oregon State College at Corvallis, Oreg.

The vice chairmen of the council's divisions are members of the executive committees of those divisions and sit in on decisions as to what work shall be done during the year in advancing the sciences with which they deal. The council has as part of its work the direction and support of certain research projects and the appointment of research fellowships. It acts as a scientific consulting body for the Government and for educational institutions throughout the country.

Mention of the civil service jobs announced today brings to mind the announcement of the publication of a new book by Herbert S. Hollander, a Washington newspaperman, on the merit system, which he says is supported almost 100 per cent by the press of the country. The book reviews the history of the merit system in its struggle against the spoils system and presents the present status of the civil service situation.

A plea from Charles A. Peters, jr., the assistant director, branch of buildings, that all Government employes working in air-conditioned buildings realize the fact and act accordingly has been circulated throughout the fortunate departments which can defy the summer heat.

"This building has been equipped with an air conditioning system for your comfort, health and efficiency," reads the little statement which is tacked on many office bulletin boards these days. "This represents a large investment, and when the system is used to advantage the returns on the investment are large."

It then lists a few "cardinal points" for the behavior of the well-behaved air conditioned worker and stresses the fact that one ignorant or selfish worker who so much as opens one window can unbalance the works.

The building superintendent would like to know if the workers are uncomfortable, Peters says, and an attempt will be made to operate the system to the satisfaction of the majority, although some Government workers are among those supersensitive ones who feel all air movements and temperature changes. And it appears that nothing much can be done for them.

Guard Destroys Shell Boys Used for Toy

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., July 30.—The 75-millimeter field-gun shell, which Police Officer M. O. Hopkins took away from a group of colored boys, has been destroyed.

It was exploded on the rifle range by National Guardsmen blowing a crater that it was 5 feet in diameter and 3 feet deep.

Police Chief James H. Martin gave the shell to Capt. Walter Squire of the Tank Company. Capt. Squire and Lieut. Taylor Nance took it to the rifle range, built a pyre of tinder wood, laid the rusted shell on it and touched off the fire. It was half an hour before the shell exploded.

The shell was smuggled in by a colored soldier. The boys from whom it was taken said it had been a family relic for several years and that they often played with it.

Co-operation Urged In Battle on Crime

Best solution of the $15,000,000,000 crime racket, described as the biggest business in the country, is close co-operation betwen local and Federal crime agencies and the individual American citizen, Inspector W. H. Drane Lester, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, told members of the Washington Kiwanis Club at their luncheon yesterday.

Capture and conviction of kidnapers and bank robbers, according to Inspector Lester, is not "a drop in the bucket" as compared with the vast work of the Department of Justice. He said that last year the department cost $5,000,000 and saved the Government more than $35,000,000

Of particular interest to the Kiwanians was the revelation by Inspector Lester that when fingerprints were first taken of applicants for civil service jobs, 1 out of 13 were found to have a criminal record; the next year, 1 out of 70, and this year, 1 out of 43.

Steel Industry Pay Proposal Spurned

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 30 (AP).—Spokesmen for employes of two steel mills in the Pittsburgh area rejected the steel industry's newly announced plan of granting time-and-a-half for work over 48 hours a week.

Walter Scale, chairman of the employe-representation unit of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Co. plant at Monessen, announced adoption of a resolution requesting instead a flat 15 per cent increase in wages.

At Vandergrift, W. B. Hadden, chairman of the employes' representation group of the Carnegie-Illinois plant, made public a resolution adopted today asking as an alternative "time and one-half for work over eight hours a day and double time from 4 p. m. Saturday until midnight Sunday."

"We were not consulted about the proposed overtime pay schedule and we do not favor it," said the Vandegrift resolution.

Scale said:

Foreign Exchange

By the Associated Press.

Growing concern in continental Europe over the possible repercussions of the Spanish civil war brought further declines in gold-bloc currencies and the pound sterling in terms of the dollar yesterday.

With success favoring the insurgents, according to latest foreign dispatches, the national quotation for Spanish pesetas declined .01 of a cent to 13.69 cents in New York. French francs eased .00¼ of a cent to 6.60⅜ cents. Holland guilders lost .81 of a cent to 68.00 cents and Swiss francs .01 of a cent to 32.69 cents.

The pound softened ⅛ of a cent to $5.01⅛. The dollar held steady in London at 5.01⅞ to the pound, compared with the overnight New York rate of 5.01¼. In Paris the American unit closed at the equivalent of 6.604 cents to the franc, against the New York overnight rate of 6.608 cents.

1. Find the apartment that meets your requirement—in the section in which you want to live.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

3. Then find the letter of the alphabet (in this case, D) at the top of the map. This means the apartment is located somewhere between the D at the top and the D at the bottom of the map.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

APPLE MARY

By Martha Orr

WHERE WILL I FIND THE OWNER OF THIS PLACE?
RIGHT HERE! BESSIE BUXHOM, IN PERSON.
I'VE HEARD YOU'RE SERVING A WONDERFUL KIND OF SPICED APPLE HERE. SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW.
WELL, I'M HERE TO BUY THAT RECIPE. HOW MUCH DO YOU WANT FOR IT?
ER-A-I'LL HAVE TO THINK THAT OVER. IT'S VERY VALUABLE—
CAN YOU BEAT THAT? MARY ACCIDENTALLY DISCOVERS A NEW WAY OF COOKIN' APPLES, AND ALREADY FOLKS ARE TEARIN' AROUND TRYIN' T'BUY IT. WHAT A BREAK FOR LITTLE BESSIE!

Funeral Today For Dr. Wood In Philadelphia

Former Washington Pastor, 85, Also Was Noted as Author.

Funeral services will be held in Philadelphia today for Dr. Charles Wood, former pastor of the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant here. Dr. Wood, who was 85, died in Philadelphia Wednesday.

Dr. Wood was pastor of the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant for 20 years, from 1908 until his retirement in 1928. During that time he brought about the formation of a National Presbyterian Church Committe and the designation of his church as the National Presbyterian Church of the United States.

Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., Dr. Wood was educated at Haverford College and at Princeton Theological Seminary. Ordained to the Presbyterian ministry in 1873, he was at once made a pastor of the Central Church in Buffalo, N. Y.

He went from there to the Fourth Church of Albany, N. Y., and then, in 1886, to the First Church of Germantown, Pa. In 1887 he was transferred to the Second Church in Philadelphia, where he remained until coming to Washington in 1908.

Dr. Wood had traveled extensively, often devoting his summer months to wanderings about Europe. In 1882 he published a book "Sauntерings in Europe."

This volume was followed by several others: "Beginning Life," published in 1887; "Friends and Foes of Youth," 1888, and "Some Moral and Religious Aspects of the War," published in 1915.

Harvard Lectures.

In 1919 he delivered the William Belden Noble lectures at Harvard. These were later issued in book form under the title of "The Living Christ and Some Problems of Today."

In 1883 Dr. Wood married Mary Hollingsworth Morris, of Philadelphia. She died in 1891. A son, Morris Wood, died several years ago. A daughter, Mrs. W. Logan MacCoy, of Philadelphia, survives.

Dr. Wood also leaves his second wife, Mrs. Alice Cox Wood, of Philadelphia.

Plans Completed For Richman Hop

New York, July 30 (AP). — Dick Merrill, the aviator, today said he and Harry Richman, the singer, had completed arrangements for the first "round-trip" flight from New York to London "between August 15 and August 20."

They will take off from Floyd Bennett Field on Long Island, he said, and land at Croydon Airport near London, returning to New York immediately after refueling "if the winds are right."

Each crossing, Merrill said, should be completed in about 15 hours. The entire flight has been financed by Richman, Merrill said, at a cost of $50,000.

It will be a busman's holiday for the aviator. He has arranged to take his vacation from airline transport duties to make the flight.

He said he would join Richman in Galveston, Tex., about August 9, pick up their plane at Los Angeles, then fly to New York and take off.

Forecaster Heat Victim.

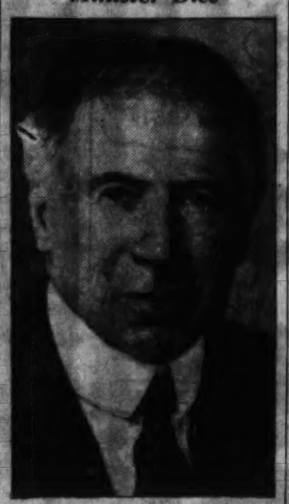
Minister Dies



DR. CHARLES WOOD.

D. J. McGillicuddy Succumbs in Maine

Daniel J. McGillicuddy, of Lewiston, Me., Democratic member of the House of Representatives from 1911 to 1916, died at his home late last night, the Associated Press reported. He was 76 years old.

A native of Lewiston, where he was born in 1859, McGillicuddy was mayor of his city in 1887, 1890 and 1902. He ran for his seat in Congress twice, in 1906 and 1908 before being elected. He served as a member of the Democratic National Commtitee from 1912 until 1932, and was active in the campaign which placed President Roosevelt in the White House.

McGillicuddy was graduated from Bowdoin College in 1881, and admitted to the bar the following year. He was active in the practice of law until the illness which caused his death.

Gen. Day, 74, Dies; Served 40 Years

The War Department was notified yesterday of the death of Brig. Gen. Frederick R. Day, retired, 74, at his home in Flushing, N. Y., Saturday.

He entered the Army as a private in 1880 and was retired at his own request in 1922 after more than 40 years of service. He then was brigadier general of the Philippine National Guard.

His Washington service included a tour of duty as a student at the Army War College from which he was graduated in 1913 and as a member of the infantry board of review in 1920.

He was awarded the silver star citation for gallantry in action against Philippine insurgent forces.

Disturbance Marks Miss Perkins' Greeting

Paris, July 30 (AP).—French suffragettes chained to chairs tonight greeted Secretary of Labor Perkins with yells "We want the vote! We want the vote!"

As Mme. Cecile Brunschvigg, undersecretary of educationfi arose to introduce Miss Perkins at the convention of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, the disturbance started.

Hotel employes, when they went to quiet the women, found them chained to their chairs. Hotel detectives threatened to eject them, chairs and all, whereupon the women produced keys to the locks on the chains, freed themselves and left the building.

Col. Max Tyler Named to New U. S. Army Post

Former District Engineer for Potomac Promoted by Roosevelt.

Col. Max C. Tyler, former District engineer for the Potomac section, was appointed assistant chief of engineers for the Army with the rank of brigadier general yesterday by President Roosevelt on the recommendation of Secretary of War Dern.

Appointment of an additional assistant chief of engineers was authorized by the law passed at the last session of Congress increasing the strength of the Engineer Corps.

In the Army for 33 years, Gen. Tyler has a distinguished record in military engineering. During the World War he served as executive officer and military adviser to the director general of military railways, earning the Distinguished Service Medal.

Since the war he has been connected with many of the leading river and harbor improvements, including the construction of the Wilson Dam at Muscle Shoals. He was chief engineer for the Federal Power Commission from 1929 to 1931.

His tour of duty as District engineer in this region was from 1919 to 1923. Gen. Tyler's other tours of duty in this city were in 1905 with the Second Battalion Engineers at Washington Barracks, in 1917, 1926 and again in 1932 in the office of the chief of engineers.

Wife Helps Posse Capture Fugitive

Bohannon's 29-year-old wife knocked a pistol out of his hand as he raised it to fire at the posse which captured him.

Bohannon, convicted of shooting down two deputy sheriffs at Idabel, Okla., in 1933, escaped with 28 other convicts May 13 after a battle in the prison brickyard. Guard C. D. Powell was slain and another guard seriously wounded.

Sheriff Ben B. Garrett, of Morris County, said Bohannon and Manuel Cox, a filling station operator, went to a boarding house at Naples this afternoon and forced Mrs. Bohannon and the daughter, Perline, into a car. They drove to Cox's house, Garrett said, where Cox and the child left the car.

Bohannon took his wife to the country roadside where they were resting when the posse drove up.

New Battle Near In Seamen's Row

New York, July 30 (AP).—A new and bitter fight for supremacy among East Coast seamen between the International Seaman's Union and an insurgent group allied with West Coast vertical unionists appeared imminent today.

Frank Jones, member of the seamen's defense committee, Joseph Curran's insurgent group expelled some time ago from the I. S. U., disclosed definite steps toward formation on the East Coast of a new maritime federation like that of the Pacific under the leadership of Harry Bridges, who headed the 1934 San Francisco strike, and others.

Jones said seamen interested in the maritime movement—which would take in marine workers of various classifications instead of those engaged only in either ship or shore duty—would meet here August 30. That meeting, he said, probably would set off a broad organization movement.

Hunt for Missing Man Speeded; Coat Is Found

Superior, Wis., July 30 (AP).—Search for the body of Robert Bernstein, 24, of Janesville, in densely-wooded sections southeast of here quickened today with reports a tan suede jacket similar to one owned by Bernstein had been found near the Brule River.

Sheriff Arthur Sedin reported the jacket was found by a farmer along highway 13, 9 miles north of Brule, which is some distance north of the area in which Laverne Marks, 19, son of a Clintonville (Wis.) minister, said he had buried the body in a pile of brush after slaying him.

Russians Enter Widening Race For Rule of Sea

By the Associated Press.

London, July 30.—Russia indicated she has entered into the expanding naval armaments race today by reaching an accord with Britain which sets no limit to her tonnage.

Other tangible evidence of naval competition among the largest powers came from Tokyo in the prediction Japan would arrange to start replacing four capital ships within the year.

The Japanese disclosure followed American and British announcements yesterday indicating accelerated naval construction as soon as the 1922 Washington and 1930 London limitation treaties expire next December 31.

The British said they would lay down the keels of two new battleships in 1937.

Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy, declared in Washington he had "not the slightest doubt" the United States would let contracts by fall for two new battleships and their keels would be laid next January.

Admiral Standley also gave urgency to Congress-authorized recruiting of 10,000 men to raise to 100,000 the Navy's enlisted strength, needed to man 23 new fighting ships scheduled for completion this year.

Theh treaty has reached final form, it was said, but is not yet signed. It is based on the London naval accord signed this year by Britain, France and the United States, with Italy and Japan refusing to participate.

It was learned, however, from authoritative Russian sources that the Soviet received a free hand on the total tonnage of its eastern fleet, a point on which it has insisted since the discussions were started.

Russia was adamant, it was learned, because it was not willing to bind itself to a Western pact in the face of an unrestricted Japanese naval program.

Nova Scotia Official Dies in Flaming House

Bebee Lake, Me., July 30 (AP).—Norman McKenzie, 67, Nova Scotian deputy minister of mines and public works, was burned to death today in a flaming cottage here owned by his daughter, Mrs. Edward T. Wyman, of Brookline, Mass.

McKenzie, who lived at Halifax, died when he ran inside the cottage to recover his belongings. Members of his family were powerless to save him.

Pekingese Dog 'Makes' N. Y. Social Register

New York, July 30 (U.P.).—There was consternation among the 400 tonight over this item in the summer Social Register:

"Morris, Mr. and Mrs. George L. K. (Estelle C. Frelinghuysen). Miss Rose. 'Brookhurst,' Lenox, Mass."

"I guess my wife did it as a joke," Morris said.

U. S. Lodge to Continue Fight to Reinstate 8

Department of Justice Lodge, No. 21, American Federation of Government Employes, voted at a special meeting last night to continue its fight for reinstatement of eight persons alleged to have been dismissed from the Bureau of Investigation for union activities.

A delegation will call on J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau, at 10 a.m. today to demand reinstatement for the eight.
